THE WORLD'S DATELINE NEWS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Philadelphia

The Revolutionary People's Constitutional Convention called by the Black Panthers to prepare a new document to "free America's oppressed" got started Saturday in a relaxed and easy going mood.

It was full of the camaraderie of people who recognized a common cause, but haven't yet tried to reach specific areas of agreement.

There wasn't much rush to get the program under way, despite many buttons bearing the Black Panther party slogan, "Seize the Time."

A crowd estimated at about 4,000, almost entirely under 30 nearly as many whites as blacks began filing into Temple University's gymnasium more than two hours after the convention business was to have started. The convention was called to propose a new constitution for the United States.

Admittance was one by one, men at one door, women at another—and all were searched top to bottom. Pocketbooks were checked. Fingers were run through hair and beards and clothing.

Outside the building, the huge aluminum flagpole, minus an American flag, was soon flying the banners of the radicals—a red flag emblazoned with the words "Free the Black Panthers," the black, green and red flag of Black Liberation and a Viet Cong flag.

The big crowd milled easily in front of the gymnasium on North Broad Street, just blocks from seamy slums where winos sat puzzled at the number of unmarked police cars passing by.

The Young Lords, a Puerto Rican group, Youth Against War and Fascism and even the Black Muslims, whose neatly tailored suits and ties contrasted sharply with most of the other dress, hawked their propaganda in the streets.

Washington

The space agency Saturday reversed itself and switched a $50 million contract for two experimental communications satellites from General Electric Co. to Fairchild Hiller Corp.

The original contract award by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration went to GE last April.

But a top-level review committee was charged with examining the contract in July and found "Fairchild was superior in both overall project organization and management."

Fairchild Hiller had protested the award to GE and Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats of the General Accounting Office agreed there should be a reconsideration.

Los Angeles

A time bomb ripped out a wall next to the district attorney's office early Saturday at the Los Angeles Hall of Justice, site of the Sharon Tate murder trial.

No one was injured.

Dist. Atty. Evelle J. Younger, surveying the damage and fearing a repeat attack, said security measures will be tightened "now that we know we will be subject to this type of thing." He did not elaborate on the security measures.

The blast blew out a restaurant's 9-by-12 red brick wall just 35 feet from Younger's office on the sixth floor of the 14-story structure where the Tate trial is being held. It also houses the county jail containing defendant Charles M. Manson and some 1,800 other prisoners.

The explosion shattered a six-inch water main and inflicted more than $10,000 damage.

Washington

A government-sponsored appraisal of four drug-treatment programs concludes that abstinence should not be main goal of such projects aimed at young people.

"It is obvious from the review of projects that those which set abstinence as a project goal failed," said the report published Saturday by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which commissioned it.

"And it is equally clear that this occurred because many youthful drug users—especially those who use marijuana—did not share in the definition of drug use as wrong and harmful."

The report was prepared by Dr. Richard Brotman, a professor of psychiatry and director of the division of community mental health at New York Medical College, and by Frederick Sufet, Brotman's research associate.

It covered a university of California center at Oakland, Calif., United Community Centers, Brooklyn, N.Y., the Denver Juvenile Court Project, and the Mobilization for Youth Drug Project in New York City. At least one of the projects has ended.

All the programs except the one in Denver established drug abstinence as their goal. The Denver project "was content to aim at reduction of use but not necessarily abstinence," the report said.

The evaluation suggested that all future drug projects for young people "establish differential goals."

"For example, for some youngsters abstinence may be a goal, while for others a reduction of drug use may be aimed at, while for still others—it may as well be admitted—the project may have to accommodate their drug use if it does not lead to dysfunctional consequences," the report said.

U.N. Reproaches Israelis

Middle East Peace Fades

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.N. Security Council demanded Saturday the complete and immediate withdrawal of all Israeli forces from Lebanon despite claims by Israel that its troops had pulled out after a 40-hour raid.

The council vote was 14 to 0, with the United States abstaining.

The session was convened at the request of Lebanon after it charged that Israeli soldiers crossed its southern border. The Lebanese denied Israel's claim that it had withdrawn its troops and said fighting was continuing.

Few Teachers Still Striking

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Elementary school teachers in East Moline voted Saturday to perform only minimal duties until their contract demands are met, and teachers in five other Illinois school districts continued their strikes for higher pay.

The elementary teachers agreed to withhold all non-classroom services beginning Tuesday, when classes resume after the Labor Day weekend. They said they would not take attendance, collect milk or lunch money or attend meetings and said they would perform only minimal after-school supervision.

The teachers are asking base pay of $8,000 with a 5 per cent annual increase for each year of Shabtai Rosenne, Israel's deputy U.N. representative, replied that Lebanon had reacted in panic to "a minor patrolling incident."

The resolution demanding an Israeli withdrawal was submitted by Spain. French Ambassador Jacques Kosciuszko-Morizet said France welcomed the measure and "fully supported" it.

U.S. Ambassador Lilliam B. Buffum told the council that while some of the reports were in conflict, there was no doubt there had been raids by Arab guerrillas from Lebanon into Israel. He said Israel had taken counteraction against them.

Because of the conflicting reports, he said, his government had instructed him to abstain. He added that adoption of the resolution would amount to a finding that Israeli troops were still in Lebanon despite Israel's "categorical" assurances of a withdrawal.

Rosenne told the council that the incursion into Lebanon was "fully justified by the free hand given the terrorists by the Lebanese government."

He said there had been since May more than 200 acts of aggression "committed from Lebanese territory" against Israel "with the connivance of the Lebanese authorities."

The Israeli raid was a minor one, he said, "in which the Lebanese army was not involved directly except for some shelling from a distance."

Lebanon sought a Security Council resolution demanding the withdrawal as well as the imposition of sanctions against Israel. However, the council adjourned until Tuesday after adopting the resolution only.

A Lebanese spokesman in Beirut said "Israeli forces are still carrying out military operations." He said the Israelis had withdrawn from the village of Kfar Hammam only, indicating Israeli troops still held Kfar Chouba, a mile away.

That was the first speaker at the 15-member Security Council meeting, in which Lebanon said it would press for "adequate punishment" of Israel.

Thant said he had received a message from an Israeli liaison officer saying "all Israeli defense forces have been withdrawn" as of 7:05 p.m. Israeli time (1:05 p.m. EDT).

The secretary-general then told the council he had sought to increase U.N. observers "on both sides without success. It means that I cannot have detailed information."

The Israelis said they sent an armored column to sweep the slopes of Mt. Hermon in south Lebanon in a search-and-destroy operation against Palestinian guerrillas. The operation began Friday and ended on Saturday, a military spokesman in Tel Aviv said.

Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami called for an urgent meeting of the 15-nation U.N. body after summoning the ambassadors of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and

New Laser Ray Equipment Can Pinpoint Pollution Sources

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP)—Stanford Research Institute scientists are photographing invisible smog with new laser ray equipment they say can pinpoint and prove the sources of air pollution.

That is a break-through in the war on smog that could revolutionize enforcement of air pollution laws and also detect dangerous "smog alert" periods hours earlier than present, said Ronald Collis, director of SRI's aerophysics laboratory.

The new equipment—"SRI-NAPCA Mark VIII Lidar"—is a computerized radar transmitter and receiver which uses intense, narrow laser light beams in the place of radio signals in radar to map the sky.

The new role of the laser in air pollution will be presented to the scientific world for the first time by SRI Wednesday at an international convention of laser scientists at the University of the West Indies in Kingston, Jamaica.

Operating like supersensitive radar, laser light will bounce off invisible particles up to five miles away, Collis said.

While the technology existed seven years ago, "now we have the equipment," said Collis, a meteorologist from Chichester, Sussex, who came to SRI from England 12 years ago.

Collis and Warren B. Johnson, manager of SRI's environmental meteorology program, have mapped the visible and invisible smoke plumes of a Pennsylvania power plant with laser radar.

They say the equipment that did that job could be mass produced today at about $50,000 for portable units tailored to needs of local air pollution control districts.

Probe Popular Detergents Polluters Listed

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Interior Department listed the phosphate content of 48 popular detergents Saturday; affirmed that phosphates pollute lakes; and asked housewives to draw their own conclusions when they go shopping.

Commissioner David D. Dominick, whose Federal Water Quality Administration issued the statement, denied in a telephone interview that he is suggesting housewives boycott high phosphate detergents.

A department statement quoted Dominick as saying the detergent tests were made public "to clear up any confusion as to the phosphate content in detergents and to serve as a general standard for the housewife for shopping in the supermarket."

Asked to explain how the housewife should apply this general standard, Dominick told a reporter, "We're not in the business of telling the consumers what they should or should not do. We're in the business of giving them legitimate scientific information and letting them draw their own conclusions."

Phosphorous found not only in detergents but also in sewage, fertilizers and industrial wastes, speeds up the natural aging of lakes by nourishing the growth of undesirable water plants which use up oxygen needed by other forms of aquatic life.

The department said a commercial laboratory ran the tests under contract. It listed its results as percentages of sodium tripoly phosphate (STPP), the most widely used form of phosphate in detergents, although "not all products contain STPP."

The statement said the results "may differ from those which had been published by sources outside the federal government" because a more accurate method was used and because different numbers result when the findings are expressed in terms of other compounds.

The department issued the following list of products and their percentage of phosphates as STPP:

Pre-soaks: Biz, 73.9 per cent; Enzyme Brion 71.4; Amway Tri-zyme 71.2; Axion 63.1.

Laundry detergents: Blue Rain Drops 63.2; Salvo 56.6; Tide 49.8; Amway SA-8 49.3; Coldwater Surf 48.2; Drive 47.4; Oxydol 46.6; Bold 45.4; Cold Water All powder 45.4; Ajax Laundry 44.6.

Cold Power 44.6; Punch 44.2; Drest 41.9; Rinso with chlorine bleach 41.0; Gain 39.5; Duz 38.3; Bestline B-7 38.0; Bonus 37.5; Breeze 37.2; Cheer 36.3.

Fab 34.8; White King with borax 34.7; Royalite 21.7; Instant Fel Soap 16.6; Wisk liquid 14.2; Par Plus 4.3; Addit liquid 2.2; Ivory Liquid 1.9; Lux Liquid 1.9; White King Soap and Coldwater ALL liquid, less than 1 per cent.

Automatic dishwasher detergents: Amway 60; Cascade 54.5; ALL 54.0; Calgonite 49.4; Electrol 34.8.

Household cleaners: Ajax all Purpose 28.5; Mr. Clean 27.0; Whistle 3.1; Pineol less than 1 per cent.

Miscellaneous: Snowy Bleach 36.4; Borateem, Downy and Amway Dish Drops, all less than 1 per cent.

A Good Convention

The proposed new Illinois constitution, which was signed Thursday by delegates to the Constitutional Convention, is a product of many compromises. For this reason it will not be wholly satisfactory to all the state's voters. The Tribune believes that the convention left undone things which it ought to have done and did some things which it ought not to have done.

The question that should be asked about the proposed new constitution is not whether it is perfect, but whether it offers some improvement over the 1870 constitution. We think it does. Moreover, the convention has given the people a fair chance to vote separately on two constitutional issues which have been subjects of discord for years. These issues deal with how to select judges and members of the state House of Representatives.

The convention also acted wisely by avoiding the highly emotional issue of state financial aid to church schools, which is forbidden by the present constitution. This question, which eventually will be decided by the United States Supreme Court, caused the defeat of a new constitution in New York a few years ago.

The delegates to the Illinois convention (with some exceptions) recognized that they were not qualified to draw up a plan for instant utopia, and they did their best to meet the immediate actualities of life. The result on the whole, is good.

Before Dec. 15, when the voters of Illinois will decide whether to accept or reject the proposed constitution, we will discuss the convention's proposals on this page. Today we would like to pay a compliment to members of the convention for their hard work.

Several delegates deserve special notice for their qualities of leadership, without which the convention often would have bogged down. Among the Republicans who distinguished themselves were Samuel W. Witwer, president of the convention; William L. Fay of Jacksonville, a stabilizing force both in committee and on the floor; John C. Parkhurst of Peoria, chief architect of the "home rule" settlement; David E. Connor of Peoria; Joseph A. Tecson of Riverside; Arthur T. Lennon of Joliet; William A. Sommerschild of Elmhurst; and Mrs. Lucy Reum of Oak Park.

The star of the Democratic delegation was Thomas J. McCracken of River Forest, chief legal adviser to the Cook County assessor. Another effective worker was State Sen. Thomas G. Lyons of Chicago, who was knowledgeable from his service as chairman of the Constitutional Study Commission.

Among the independent Democrats the outstanding delegate was Wayne W. Whalen of Hanover, chairman of the style and drafting committee and one of the most effective spokesmen for reform of the judicial article. Another notable independent was Mrs. Dawn Clark Netsch of Chicago, a law professor.

Two black delegates were especially valuable members of the convention. Miss Odas Nicholson, a Chicago attorney, often spoke with wit and wisdom. Albert A. Raby, a Chicago teacher, came to the convention with a reputation as a civil rights zealot, but on the convention floor he was levelheaded, constructive, and effective.

The Tribune disagreed with the positions taken by some of these distinguished delegates, but there is no question about their intelligence and devotion. Some of them no doubt will be heard from in future political wars.

Cambodian Military, Political Situation Worsens

By JOHN T. WHEELER
Associated Press Writer
PHNOM PENH (AP) — In the two months since U.S. troops pulled out of Cambodia, Gen. Lon Nol's government has steadily lost ground in its war against the Communists.

Washington has granted Phnom Penh $49 million in military aid and has committed imited U.S. air power to back up government troops in the field. But this has not halted, much less reversed, the deteriorating military and political situation.

The overriding impression is that the government's strategy of abandoning more than half the country to Communist control to insure the defense of the capital and the nation's heartland is not working well. The plan called for abandoning the entire northeast, most of the extreme north, and some areas that were once held by South Vietnamese and American troops.

The heartland starts southeast of Phnom Penh and runs in a wide belt to the northwest, taking in the rich rice and fish-producing areas on both sides of Cambodia's huge lake, the Tonle Sap. Most of the country's population is centered in this area.

But nearly all of the north shore of the lake is controlled by the Communists. The government strongpoints at Siem Reap 155 miles northwest of Phnom Penh, and Kompong Thom, 80 miles north of the capital, are not doing well. Roads to Siem Reap are out periodically and Kompong Thom, a provincial capital, has been surrounded for months. Government casualties have been heavy at Kompong Thom, and food is so short that soldiers and townspeople slaughtered the animals in the city's zoo for meat.

The Communists have made no serious attempt to attack Phnom Penh, but the city's defenses are not particularly strong. The capital is particularly wide open to rocket and mortar attacks from across the Mekong River to the east.

Four of Cambodia's seven major highways have been closed almost continuously for three or more months. Highway 4, which links Phnom Penh with Kompong Som, the country's only remaining access to the ocean, remains open only because enemy troops have not blown one of the many lightly defended bridges running through the Elephant Mountains.

On the northern front, fishing areas populated mainly by ethnic Vietnamese have provided more or less willing recruits and transportation workers to the Communists, especially after the Cambodians slaughtered many Vietnamese living in Cambodia during the early days of the war.

The government officially denies that the Khmer Rouge, the Cambodian followers of Prince Sihanouk, pose any problem. But field commanders again tell a different story.

Communist sources say 8 per cent of the Communist force is Cambodians.

American bombing in Cambodia has proved a mixed blessing. Massive attacks against Communist supply lines leading to Vietnam through Cambodia are now routine, and damage sometimes inevitably extends to civilian areas. Tactical strikes around Siem Reap are reported to have been one of the best recruiting points for the Communists, who claim that the Americans are out to conquer Cambodia and are destroying villages with their planes.

Nevertheless, experts comparing the war with the one in Vietnam say the Communists in Cambodia are fighting at little more than half speed.

"The Communists have had Kompong Thom surrounded for three months," one Western expert said. "They could have taken it, but they haven't. One of the unwholesome side effects is that the government is getting cocky when it should be getting more frightened when it looks at the situation map."

"The way they have set up the defenses of Phnom Penh shows they haven't learned the lessons of Vietnam or figured out the logical consequences of Hanoi's brand of mobile warfare. If the Communists wanted, they could put a regiment in the royal palace on the night of their choosing if they were willing to accept the casualties."

One Western diplomat commented: "That the Communists have not done more, a lot more, in Cambodia seems due either to a political decision in Hanoi or a reluctance to suffer battlefield casualties which could better be spent in Vietnam. Or maybe they just aren't ready yet."

Prodigal Educators Rankle Governors

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Not too many American governors are willing to say much about it publicly, but a high proportion of them have come to have great distaste for the education lobby.

Generally, they find it arrogantly demanding, with little balancing sense of responsibility and accountability.

Unlike some other lobbies, the education groups are perpetually garbed in the robes of nobility. Who can be against education, especially when so much seems to be needed?

Yet the educators have a voracious appetite for money. And all too many of them, to listen to the governors, appear to feel that spending more and more of it is the answer to all their problems.

A population giant like New York State already puts about 40 per cent of its state revenues into education. Many others large and small are in the 40 to 50 per cent category, Michigan being one at the higher end of this span. The hard-pressed state of Washington, now suffering around a nine per cent unemployment rate, lays out nearly 65 per cent of all its revenues for education.

Obviously, the governors do not want to short-change schooling, which is still grossly inadequate and inequitable in countless places.

What they want from the educators is far more ingenuitously in devising new ways to improve educational techniques, to get more schooling for the dollar. They also want accountability, and willingness — not often if ever shown, according to numerous governors — to submit their operations to new standards and measures which will put a better gauge than now exists on the quality of education.

A lot of outside study groups have suggested that the states ought to take over the entire burden financially in education. A good many governors favor that proposition and more probably could be convinced.

The key to the idea is to have the states take over the property tax now levied at the local and county level. There is a growing conviction among the nation's governors, supported by survey after survey, that, as administered locally, the property tax is one of the chief causes of inequity in the schools.

In one large industrial state, for instance, the sums spent on schooling range from a low of $500 to a high of around $1,100 per pupil per year. The judgment is that, other factors aside, there will never be even-handed spending for education so long as petty squabbling over property tax rates goes on at the local level.

The governors who like the notion of a state property tax take-over are not necessarily dreaming of higher rates. But this device would, of course, provide them with vitally needed additional revenues to help compensate for the assumption of the whole education money burden.

In certain states favoring this change, the governors would leave to the local and other school districts the crucial technical matters involved in improving the quality of schools. Some pretty horrendous reports have been offered in recent years as to the effectiveness of countless U.S. schools.

Michigan has been in the vanguard but is not alone in advancing the proposal that this is where the educators ought to be concentrating their energies — rather than just automatically demanding more money all the time.

Ann Landers:

Urged To Make Effort To Overcome Miserliness

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me if there is something wrong with my mind, like mental illness, I mean. I am twelve years old and I am so cheap it is disgusting. I just love it when somebody buys me an ice cream cone or gives me half a candy bar. And I am thrilled when I get a present of any kind. But when it comes to spending a dime on someone else I can always think of a dozen reasons why I shouldn't. I save almost all my allowance. Right now I have $43 put away. On Mother's Day I made up a poem so I wouldn't have to spend any money on a present. My mother was very pleased and even said it was a better gift than anything money could buy. On Father's Day I did the same thing. The poem I composed for my dad wasn't as good as Mom's and I think maybe he caught on to me.

Please explain why a 12-year-old should act like this. Will I outgrow it? — Cheapskate (P.S. I asked my Mom for a postage stamp to mail this letter although I have stamps of my own. See what I mean?)

Dear Cheap: Yeah, I see what you mean — and you are not going to outgrow it. You're probably got worse unless you make a conscious effort to improve. Decide what you consider your responsibilities (apparently a Mother's Day gift falls into this category, although it need not), then force yourself to act on it. After a while, you will establish a pattern of "coming through" when you feel you should and it won't be so painful.

wrong. Instead he gave me $2500 and told me I could do what I wanted — put a down payment on a house, get an abortion or leave town. Marriage wasn't one of the choices he offered.

I decided to buy a house and stay in town, hoping he'd change his mind. Now I find I am NOT pregnant and never was. I was too ashamed to admit the truth so I lied and said I had a miscarriage. He believed me. Last week he told me in plain language that our romance is finished because he cannot afford any more scares like the one I gave him. He also said, "For a 26-year-old girl you are too dumb for me."

I am renting the house and giving him a percentage of the rent. But I feel guilty because I lied to him. Should I tell him the truth so I can sleep better at night? I promise to do as you say. — Messed Up At 26

Dear 26: Tell him the truth. Since he gave you the money and the choices, the house belongs to you. I hope now you will sleep better at night — and alone.

Dear Ann Landers: I am dating a very attractive girl (age 24). The trouble is, she is too attractive. She attracts all kinds of guys and I am beginning to think she does it on purpose. Whenever we go any place she starts conversations with strangers. I've told her I don't like it. She says she has a naturally outgoing personality, and I should be proud of her friendliness. Please comment. — Big Frank

Dear Frank: Sounds as if the girl's "outgoing personality" is going out in too many directions. Don't make any serious plans (like marriage) until you learn the limits to her friendliness.

Mind-Influencing Drugs

The fantasy of the "mad scientist" who gains control over the minds of others is a common theme of horror stories and films. Developments in recent years have brought us very close to the time when exertion of outside influence on the mind through chemical or other means is not mere fantasy, but possible reality.

There is a further reminder of this in dispatches from California about the use of a drug that plunges the subject into total paralysis which nevertheless leaves him highly receptive to suggestion by a therapist. The drug, anectine, has been used at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville in an attempt to alter the behavior patterns of criminals.

The person injected with anectine reportedly feels profound terror which seems to last a long time, even though the paralysis continues for only a minute or so. Admonitions to recall what he is feeling when next he has a criminal impulse stick with him afterwards like post-hypnotic suggestion.

Even those who take no exception to use of the drug for such a laudable purpose may feel qualms at some of the possibilities that arise. It is plain that this and other mind-influencing drugs in the wrong hands could do terrible harm in a free society. We had better work out controls over the mind-controllers.

Law For Today

Q. Is it true that the age limits for marrying without parental consent have been lowered from 21 for males and 18 for females? If so, what are the new limits?

A. The age limits for marrying without parental consent remain the same in Illinois—that is, 21 for males and 18 for females. However, there is a new law which expands the option of marrying with consent. Generally, as under the old law, parental consent will permit a boy to marry at age 18 or a girl at age 16. Under the new law, these limits may be lowered to 16 for the groom and 15 for the bride if she is pregnant or has given birth to a child. In this case, a court order as well as parental consent is necessary and it must be shown that the couple is entering into the marriage in good faith and not merely to legitimize the child. —Illinois State Bar Assn.

Mexican City Cuernavaca Offers Beauty, History, Rest

Associated Press Writer
CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) — After the excitement and thrill of a vacation of Mexico's popular resort cities, says a day and night for a comfortable and uncomplicated rest at Cuernavaca — "The City of Eternal Spring."

This valley of subtropical climate was the one selected four and a half centuries ago by Hernando Cortez as his reward from the King of Spain for his conquest of Mexico.

Before Cortez, the Aztec Emperor Montezuma travelled here each winter with his warriors and court to enjoy the never changing balmy climate.

Emperor Maximilian and Carlota also maintained a home here like so many "Gringos" from north of the border do nowadays.

The temperature here is always around 80 degrees and the sun shines brilliantly 360 days of the year.

Cuernavaca, which has been described as a city that doesn't strive for anything in particular, now serves as the capital of the state of Morelos. In ancient times its name was Tlahuica and later the Aztecs called it Cuauhnahuac. But the Spaniards couldn't pronounce either and so it became known as Cuernavaca, "cow's horn."

Almost all the streets look the same; narrow and old in appearance.

There are public squares near the center of town teeming with traffic and pedestrians. In the evenings soft conversation in English and Spanish fills the air wherever one walks, while strains of guitars waft through this quiet Shangri-La.

Sidewalk cafes abound with happy residents and vacationers as others slowly mingle in and out of interesting little Mexican shops.

During the day the sounds of birds are noticeable as is the endless abundance of hibiscuses, vast masses of purple and rose bougainvilleas, magenta and white passion flowers and scarlet and yellow poinsettias.

Poinsettia, the red Christmas flower so popular in the U.S., is called "flor de noche buena" here. But in 1936, the U.S. Minister to Mexico, Joel Robert Poinsett, took the plant from Cuernavaca back to his native South Carolina where its popularity began and its name was changed.

For the history enthusiast, there's Cortez' palace built in the 16th century for his second wife. On the second level are the famed Diego Rivera murals depicting Cortez' conquest.

For beauty lovers, there's the Borda Gardens, built in the early 18th century by Frenchman Jose De La Borda who became known as the "Silver King" of Mexico. Later, Maximilian and Carlota were to reside there during the second empire (1865-67).

There are pyramids from centuries ago built by the Olmec Indians who worshipped the sun and the moon.

Many ancient churches are located about this city. One of these is the San Francisco Cathedral which was founded by Cortez in 1525 and remains one of the oldest churches in Mexico.

For old and young alike, an afternoon in Chapultepec Park is a must. Relatively small, it has everything including a zoo, swimming pools, and a lake for rowboating and canoeing.

Walking along the immaculately manicured paths through the park, one is surrounded by blossoming flowers and growing bananas giving the appearance of an immense garden.

There's much more to see and enjoy, not only in Cuernavaca, but in its surrounding areas. It is only about 50 miles or 45 minutes due south of Mexico City via a toll road (6 pesos or 64 U.S. cents) or a free winding road that will extend the drive by about 20 minutes and takes you through some beautiful mountain areas.

In May 1970, a contest, "Battle of the Bands" was held at Godfrey Civic Center and included eight bands, one from this area, the "Syndicate of Soul" which won.

The Syndicate of Soul band is composed of Aaron Lovett, male vocalist who was wounded while serving with the Marine Corps in Vietnam; Jackie Smith, female vocalist; Jerry Kirbach, organ; David Olmstead, lead guitar; Mike Booth, bass guitar; Theda Black, vocalist; Jerry Grover, saxophone; Kerry Walter, trumpet; Russell Wyman, trombone and David Banks, drums. All are from the Greene county area. Their manager is Albert Kirbach of Carrollton.

The band competed in the Jaycees National Regional Finals in Toledo, Ohio, on August 21, representing the state of Illinois and won for the second time. They will compete in the National Finals on September 19. These finals will be held in New York.

Our Mother, the Clam
When the season is upon her, the female bitterling fish deposits her eggs into the mantle cavity of a freshwater clam. The clam incubates the eggs and they hatch within its shell.

Growing Old In America

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — The barber visits on Tuesday. The beautician on Wednesday. The doctor on Friday. The visiting nurse three times a week. Local politicians make a house call shortly before election day.

Thus does the outside world make small thrusts into the lives of the men and women of Brush Hollow Arms, Home For Adults. Population: 86. Average age: 78.

A small town in a sense. Like hundreds of other such homes for the aged and infirm in America. Actually, only a converted motel in a cluster of offices on the edge of Westbury, Long Island. With such unlikely neighbors as an indoor tennis club and a bowling alley.

Inside, the pace is a shuffle. Even the clocks seem to run slower. The loudest sounds are the piped-in music, the television, the occasional ring of staff laughter from the kitchen, the telephone.

Yet in this quiet place, the bent bodies, the tremors, the lonely faces mirror all that living holds, all that awaits youth. They tell the story of growing old in America, and the fragile bridging of centuries and generations.

Lillian Elliott will be 86 this month, a tiny woman who says she's put on 12 pounds since she arrived eight months ago, white-haired, the angelic look of age, quick eyes, slow smile, slow to start, slow to fade. A widow for 48 years. She lost her husband after only a dozen years of marriage. Then a son, a flier over the Pacific during World War II.

"When he left," she remembers, "he said, 'Don't worry, Mom. When I come back, we'll get a bigger apartment.' He never came back. You know, my husband was a good man, but I felt worse about losing my boy. A child is a part of you."

She lived for 26 years with a married daughter, and then decided to leave. "I took care of my mother for a long while. I know how they felt. They deserve time to be alone. Now I'm happy because they're happy."

But the week she came to Brush Hollow she cried every night. Then she decided to adjust to a new world, and did.

"This is home now. And it will be until the Lord calls me home. And he can anytime. I'm ready. The sooner the better."

A smile on her face. Her voice matter of fact. No self pity. So many just didn't intend to live so long. In their youth it didn't seem likely. People died in their fifties and sixties. If old age is relative, death is inevitable. To some, a relief, a promise, even a beginning.

So put it in the closet, in the back of the mind. Fear? No, only a modicum of regret. The body is wearing out, and it's something of an embarrassment to be still around.

There is something far worse than an awareness of death. It is an awareness of a lessened life, a lessened importance, a lessened independence.

There is a prayer about growing old that hangs on the bulletin board. It says in part:

"Keep me from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion."

"Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs."

"Make me thoughtful but not moody; help me not to be bossy."

"With my vast store of wisdom, it seems a pity not to use it all, but . . . I want a few friends at the end."

Two old ladies sit side by side in the easy chairs in the lounge. The television set is on but they are not watching. Lunch is just over, and they are resting.

Nearby, Mrs. Elliott operates the "Cozy Corner Store," where residents can buy clothespins, witch hazel, rubbing alcohol, aspirin, hair spray, denture cream, foot powder. There's no other store close by.

What do you run out of most often? That smile spreads coyly, and she half-turns her back as if she wasn't going to answer, but her finger slyly taps the Milk of Magnesia and the Ex-Lax.

Joseph Rolli, 73, is sitting in the patio under an umbrella with three other men. They aren't talking. They are only sitting. He wears the thick glasses of a cataract victim.

He's been separated from his wife for, he can't remember, eight or 10 years. For exercise and to pass the time he walks through the building two or three times a day. He was a baker all his life, Italian bread and rolls. He would put in a 16 to 18 hour day beginning at 4 a.m. He would bake first, and then take over one of the delivery routes. "You would have to work a hundred years to catch up with me," he says.

But then he lost his sight, and then his home in Northport because he couldn't take care of himself anymore. And he sold his bakery, and now he is here. He punctuates his story with desperation, "Jesus Christ, such a disappointment. I wasn't old enough to retire. What the hell you going to do?"

And finally, "I'm very disappointed in life. I got a dirty deal. I thought I was doing something right, but I was doing something wrong. I have my wife and three kids and we talk, but it's no use."

And he keeps wondering why hard work ends this way.

Disappointment. Learn to put it in your pocket, somewhere in the back of your mind.

Two ladies have become good friends. They were together before they got here. Both were under psychiatric treatment at another institution. Erna Stein says she tried to commit suicide. She is 72. Eva Grumantel says her nerves dissolve. She is 60.

Mrs. Stein: "Life really is over. We're here waiting for the end."

What do you do to pass the time?

Mrs. Grumantel: "Almost nothing. We walk a lot and we watch TV. We used to knit a lot, but the arts and crafts teacher is gone now."

Have they found others to talk to, to share with here at Brush Hollow?

Mrs. Stein: "No. It is difficult to talk with the others. Every one wants to talk about themselves. Little things they find wrong in the day, or the night."

"The naked truth is nobody wants us . . . We have been told very honestly that when the money runs out we go on welfare."

Have you found much to share together?

Mrs. Grumantel: "If we have nothing to say, we understand that maybe we are not too optimistic that day. We are not very happy."

Friendship in a room for two. Sharing means sharing silence as well as sound. Time edges on.

Both women have been told they are only at Brush Hollow temporarily, a sort of half-way house by doctor's orders. But neither sees much ahead.

"We still think in the back of our mind that there must be some way out," says Mrs. Grumantel.

Mrs. Stein looks over the patio and the dozing men, the resting ladies. "Some people feel content that there is no future," she says quietly.

The afternoon drags. Some ladies seek to fill it with bingo. Some with chatter. Some with reading. Some with quiet thoughts of the past.

Charlotte Holder keeps a schedule of events going. The idea of Gene Neville, the 42-year-old who operates Brush Hollow, is to keep the minds of the residents stimulated. There is everything from card games and dominoes to mandatory discussion groups on Thursday, the day between the beautician and the doctor.

Family can come any day. Family is the best medicine. Those without it feel isolated. Margaret O'Boyle has a daughter who spends a great deal of time at Brush Hollow. The daughter, Margaret Lyons, says, "I have 20 other mothers here, and a couple of fathers too." She takes them to lunch and shopping, and those things do more for the affairs of the mind than anything else.

In an upstairs room, Thomas Heffernan, 78, reads the New York Times, watches television and heads one of the Thursday discussion groups. He suggests the topic for next Thursday be: "Do you think a girl could like a man of a different color?" It is intended to scandalize a bit.

He also delighted in introducing his niece to other residents as "an unwed mother." Then he would explain that she had retired as a Mother Superior in the Dominican Order.

In his seventies, Heffernan looks barely 50. He follows the stock market reports in the paper each morning to "find out today what I should have done six weeks ago." He seems to find friends wherever he goes.

But Heffernan has two aces in the hole. He is financially independent, and he has sons nearby who visit frequently and take him into their homes. While his roommate dozes on the next bed, Heffernan thinks of cruising on a son's power boat and sipping a Manhattan. And every night he plays bridge—with the bridge column in the newspaper.

Brush Hollow is full of bright, old people. Pauline Coleman is 89. She lived for 50 years in the same apartment in New York City. She remembers it fondly, and misses the housekeeping.

Now she spends her time "simply loafing," and accepts it. "Old age requires it," she says. "I'm taking full advantage of the chance. There's not much time left."

Leisure and acceptance of it. That sets them aside from the outside world with its duties, its bustle to make appointments. There are so many differences between today and yesterday, between inside and outside.

Mr. and Mrs. William Craven have been married 63 years. They have always taken care of themselves, from their pioneer childhood on the Nebraska prairie to the New York farm they ran, to the Florida home they moved into for retirement. He is 90. She is 88.

Their independence ended in a Florida intersection when a car full of youngsters ran a red light and hit their station wagon broadside. Craven has never completely recovered, and now she cares for him in their room at Brush Hollow. It opens onto the patio.

Now she sits with small pieces of plastic and a jar of glue repairing the catheters that he must wear. In the corner, still packed are some of her oil paintings. She hasn't painted for a while now. There hasn't been time.

Jesse Searles is 83. He paints too, landscapes, seascapes, some portraits. For 45 years he was a sign painter on Long Island. Now he makes up the pictorial calendar of events for Brush Hollow, and paints scenes from other pictures and from memory.

Mary Kerrigan, a wispy little Irish lady who used to say, "God didn't make me beautiful," lived down the hall. But everyone agreed she was beautiful in her way.

Jesse doesn't know how to ask, but something is bothering him about Mary Kerrigan. Finally he says that he'd heard a rumor. "I hope I'm wrong," he says. "I hope I'm wrong."

Charlotte Holder looks into his watery eyes, into the drawn lines of his face. "I'm afraid you're not wrong, Jesse."

African Leper Colony Offers Treatment, Hope

By C. C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer
BALUBA, Uganda (AP) — The small sign on the Jinja-Nairobi road indicates the turnoff to Baluba, but does not say what is here.

Many of those who have been here prefer not to admit it. Baluba is a leprosarium, or leper colony, as they were once known.

Improper burial of a grandparent, a witch doctor's curse and other superstitions are locally accepted as reasons for acquiring the disease.

Indeed, even educated patients sometimes flee when confronted with the laboratory diagnosis. Others accept it with resignation.

Since Biblical days lepers have been feared and scorned. Here there is hope.

All of the 300 to 500 resident patients have some sort of job, and all receive free medical treatment as well as education, training and specially built shoes or artificial limbs, depending on need.

The 100-bed hospital treats leprosy symptoms and all the other ailments and diseases which befall residents or outpatients.

"In the old days they used to come here and stay until they died. Now, if we catch it early enough and start treatment, some may leave in 12 to 18 months," says Sister Aelred of the Irish-based Franciscan Missionary Sisters for Africa.

Founded in 1934, by the Franciscan Missionary Sisters, Baluba began with three mud huts. Sister Felicity, who runs the pharmacy today, remembered the early years when patients and sisters dug ditches to keep hippos out of the vegetable patch on the shore of Lake Victoria.

Now there are more than 50 buildings including cheerful communal dining halls and quarters for families.

Baluba's only doctor, Wanda Blenska, of Poland, arrived in 1951, found she was needed, and stayed on to become one of Africa's unsung bush doctors.

She performed nine operations one day recently; cares for all resident patients and sees perhaps 300 outpatients a week; lectures visiting medical students and handles the "unexpected" in her spare time.

Greeted as "Mama" by many patients, her easy manner helps those confined for long periods. One such patient, an elderly woman, has lost her sight and is losing her voice due to leprosy. Her toes and fingers have disappeared. Drugs to help her were discovered too late.

But today such cases are unusual. Modern drugs can stop leprosy's progress, and physical and psychological therapy can teach its victims to lead normal lives.

The World Health Organization estimates that there are three million registered leprosy patients in the world. But spot surveys by WHO suggest that more than 10 million persons have leprosy.

WHO's figures, from 1966, list 177,000 registrations in the United States, with a guestimate of 358,000 actual cases; 1.7 million in Africa with at least that many more unregistered; 915,000 in Asia with a guestimate of 6.4 million and 16,000 registered in Europe out of a guestimate of 33,000 with leprosy.

Leprosy victims lose all sense of life in the infected areas and horrible burns and cuts are frequent, painless injuries. Victims are unable to safely hold objects with their fingers because they don't know how tightly they are gripping.

Doctors estimate that five persons in a thousand are susceptible and the incubation period may range from 3 to 20 years.

Aid from OXFAM and private British and German foundations, the Uganda government and a self-help spirit at the Baluba farms keeps Baluba going. Its sparkling laboratory is one of dozens of research centers around the globe searching for better medical treatment.

None of those who have worked here have ever contracted leprosy, according to the sisters.

RUSSIANS TRY TO CONTACT MISS MAKAROVA

LONDON (AP) — Tiny Natalia Makarova, ranking ballerina of Russian ballet, took seclusion somewhere in Britain Saturday while the Soviet Embassy sought to change her mind about defecting to the West.

A Foreign Office spokesman said it could be taken for granted that a formal Soviet request to talk to the ballet star "had been passed along to Miss Makarova."

But a Home Office source said it appeared "extremely unlikely" she would listen to the Russian entreaty. British rules of asylum stipulate her agreement would be required.

The 30-year-old ballerina, considered one of the world's outstanding giselles and former partner of Rudolph Nureyev, defected Friday.

She gave Russian security officers the slip at London's Royal Festival Hall shortly before she was to appear in the final performance of a six-week engagement by Leningrad's Kirov Ballet.

The almond-eyed, vivacious ballerina, in a halting mixture of English and French, told Scotland Yard she wasn't defecting for political reasons. She said she just wanted to broaden her career and she thought, with Nureyev's example before her, that Britain offered more opportunities.

Election Reform May Have Votes To Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Saturday there now are 55 to 60 solid Senate votes for a Constitutional amendment providing for the election of the president by direct popular vote.

Although this is short of the required two-thirds majority, Bayh said there is a possibility of getting the vote of as many as 75 of the 100 senators.

The proposed amendment, approved by the House a year ago by a 339-70 vote, is the first order of business when the Senate returns Sept. 8 from its Labor Day recess.

"I think we are going to have a very hard fought battle, and it could be lengthy, but in the end I think we are going to pass it," said Bayh, chief Senate sponsor of the direct election proposal.

Opponents plan to offer a number of substitute proposals, but Bayh told a news conference he expects these will be rejected.

If it appears after about two weeks of debate that a filibuster is under way, Bayh said, an attempt may be made to invoke the Senate's debate-limiting closure rule.

A two-thirds majority is required to put the rule into effect. If this move failed by a substantial margin, Senate leaders might lay the proposed amendment aside because of the pressure of other legislation.

However, Bayh said he intends to do everything he can to get an up or down vote on the amendment.

He said he had talked with majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and Mansfield indicated the Senate may go on a two-shift schedule—working on electoral reform in the daytime and other legislation at night.

The direct election plan provides that the winner will be the candidate receiving 40 per cent or more of the popular vote nationwide. If no candidate gets 40 per cent, a run-off election would be held between the two top vote getters.

Labor Leaders Denounce Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top union leaders spent time Tuesday to head off Thursday's scheduled strike of some 50,000 rail workers.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, who will be Nixon's principal dinner guest Monday night, led the attack on Nixon's economic policies in a statement asserting that the President's anti-inflation policies of high interest, tight money and federal spending cuts have enriched banks and big corporations and caused a recession.

"But the results for America's wage earners, pensioners, the poor and small businessmen have been anything but bright," said the 76-year-old president of the 1.6-million-member labor federation.

Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson has summoned the presidents of four AFL-CIO unions to a meeting Tuesday to try to head off Thursday's scheduled strike of some 50,000 rail workers.

Meany's complaints were bolstered by a Labor Department report Friday that the nation's jobless rate rose to a near six-year high of 5.1 per cent of the work force in August while total employment dropped 400,000, and the factory work week, overtime and worker's purchasing power all declined.

"The cost of living is rising at a rate of 6 per cent a year, compared with a rate of 4.2 per cent the year before President Nixon took office," said President I. W. Abel of the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers Union.

Abel sent regrets that he couldn't make the White House dinner because of other commitments.

But, despite their complaints over Nixon's policies, most of the other invited labor leaders accepted his invitation to dine on supreme of salmon, roast prime ribs of beef and baked Alaska, and sip Pinot Chardonnay and other fine wines in the East Room of the White House.

After dinner and cordials, the Nixons and their approximately 200 guests—labor leaders, administration officials, newsmen and their wives—will attend the torchlight military pageantry on the south lawn along with the 3,000 other union members and their families.

Union officials expressed differing views of Nixon's unprecedented Labor Day celebration at the White House.

"It's the smartest thought, politically and otherwise, to come out of the White House since there has been a White House," said President Joseph A. Beirne of the AFL-CIO Communications Workers of America.

"It's a gimmick," said President Floyd Smith of the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists. "Nixon is no different than when he first came to Washington as a congressman."

But Smith, as well as Beirne, planned to attend the dinner.

Five Arrested In Springfield Gambling Raid

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Illinois Bureau of Investigation agents and local police arrested five persons Friday following a raid on an alleged gambling operation in an eastside Springfield home.

Four of the five were jailed and the fifth person, William Pullum, 62, was placed under intensive care at a local hospital after apparently suffering a heart attack during the raid.

Jailed were Mrs. Hallie Robert, 39; Mrs. Thelma Jordan, 26; Mrs. Jesse Jackson, 53, and Donald Hubbard, 41.

The five, all of Springfield, were charged with syndicated gambling for running a policy wheel.

A spokesman for the organized crime division of the FBI said policy wheel, policy slips, printing equipment and $1,000 in cash were confiscated.

The spokesman estimated that between $500,000 and a million dollars were taken in annually by the operation, which conducted two drawings a day, he said.

SORORITY PICNIC AT OVERTON HOME

Jacksonville Alumnae chapter of Alpha Iota sorority enjoyed a picnic August 27 at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Overton. The delicious meal was prepared and served by Frances Overton and Doris DeShara.

Members attending were Dixie Little, Lana Little, Rosalee Roegge, Connie Spencer, Susan Allen, Jean Robertson, Doris Petefish, Delores Hoots, Mary Jane Morris, Ila Mae Wilson, Martha Lorton, Margaret Carigan, Mary Bentena, Helen Cook, Dorothy Crabtree, Donna Burrus and Mary Catherine Roache. Guests attending were Shawn Robertson, Debbie Merritt, Sue Ann DeShara, Renee and Timmy Childers.

The Lebanese Army spokesman said the Israeli attack began Friday night with aerial and artillery bombardments.

The area on the western slopes of Mt. Hermon is known as "fatahland" in Israel because the Palestinian guerrillas use it as a base for attacks against Israeli settlements.

The villages hit were Kfar Chouba, Kfar Hamam and Rachaya Foukhar. They are two, three and six miles respectively from the Lebanese-Israeli border.

The spokesman said the fighting was still raging. The Israelis have expanded the area of their attack to include the villages of Habbaria and Friedis, three miles west of the original target of the offensive, he added.

Mideast

Karami told newsmen, "We have demanded the Security Council intervention to stop the Israeli aggression and subject Israel to an adequate punishment."

In New York, Lebanese Charge d'Affaires Yahya Mahmassani delivered a letter to this month's president of the Security Council, Ambassador Davidson S.H.W. Nicol of Sierra Leone, charging that two companies of Israeli infantry under heavy air and artillery support had penetrated four miles inside Lebanon.

Mahmassani said the troops were opening up roads for further "Israeli military use." He said the attack took place at 1 p.m. local time Saturday.

An army spokesman in Beirut said Israeli forces had launched a three-pronged attack on south Lebanon behind a screen of bombing and strafing jets. The offensive was mounted from the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights of Syria against three adjacent Lebanese villages on the western slopes of Mt. Hermon, he said.

"Our armored units and heavy artillery stopped the advance of the Israeli attackers east of Rachaya Foukhar," a township four miles inside Lebanese territory, the spokesman said.

Pottery Is Outlet for Individual Expression

By AILEEN SNODDY
NEW YORK (NEA) — As a child in Hartford, Conn., Paul Bellardo used to hang on to his father's hand while touring gardens. Now as a ceramist, "X number" of years later he finds himself a fatherly influence in the use of handcrafted items for the home.

Bellardo has been in ceramics since 1946 but realizes his interest started when "I used to follow my father around. He designed urns and did gardening. This led to my deep interest in plants, flowers and design."

Those who have seen revivals of the classic Ohio - girls - go to - New York in "My Sister Ellen" will feel at home with Bellardo since his pottery shop is on Christopher st. in Greenwich Village. As a handcraftsman he represents the artist today. Crafted items are much the same but their companions are different - ceramics and earthenware mixing with fine china and silver for a table setting.

Bellardo definitely feels there is a trend to mixing of handcrafted items with the commercially made.

"I've found," he explains, "that more people are willing to pay $6 to $8 for a handmade goblet that is utilitarian than will buy a mass-produced item. They'll look at a $15 handmade ash tray and say, 'Wow, $15 for an ash tray,' and buy it."

There are lots of potters around, and he feels all are finding more people want something individual and are willing to pay for it.

"More people are collectors and want variety in a grouping. For example, a couple will set a table with pewter, paper and pottery. Suddenly, we all realize everything doesn't have to be blue and excessively co-ordinated."

"Often I see someone stop outside the shop window. Then he'll come in and want to talk. People express themselves more now... they openly discuss their visits to an analyst and their problems. You see expression in dress and the home... table settings. The feeling is not to hold back."

With the surge of interest in handcrafted items for home entertaining and decorating, Bellardo suggests that a shopper check the bottom of a piece to make certain it is authentic.

"Look for the artist's name or mechanical stamp," he suggests, "or ask for a paper of authenticity from the seller for insurance."

After study in Boston, a ten-year stint at the Museum School in Boston and a shot at a full-fledged art gallery in Provincetown, Mass., he decided his true outlet was in "throwing" vases, apples, pears, mushrooms, etc.

To meet the demands of his growing clientele. A year's study in Italy influenced his work... "It gave it an architectural feeling. I didn't realize it while in Europe, but an astute person remembers something he learned ten years ago and it comes out in his work."

"I feel many buy my work and that of other ceramists because it is like one - of a kind originals often found only in a museum," he points out as another explanation of the mounting interest in handcrafted works. Among his customers are composer Jerry Herman (Hello, Dolly; Mame), comedienne and cousin Kaye Ballard, TV's Eve Arden and actress Barbara Harris.

"I like to do fruits and vegetables. So, a mushroom is a mushroom but it is art depending upon what you do with it," he says. "I get many commissions but what comes out depends upon how I feel about it."

Currently, Bellardo is doing a series of sculptured pears and with Christmas coming he will be turning out apples. "People give them at Christmas as love apple," he explains. It has been a slow summer but people are starting to spend now for gifts and they want something creative and different, very similar to crafted goblets and covered soup dishes he selected to go with an Onida stainless flatware pattern called Rose Shadow to illustrate the artistic mix more people like to live with. He uses bright colors - apple red, shiny yellow, earth tones and pale greens.

He welcomes visitors to his Christopher street studio to watch him work at what he enjoys doing most - "I'll always be in ceramics. If I'm not creating, I feel very unhappy."

His feeling as a professional is echoed by thousands of amateur ceramists and potters in the United States.

Agatha Christie: Supreme Sleuth

By DONALD M. McNICOLL
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — "Nothing," says Agatha Christie, "has surprised me more in life than to have become a famous author."

Miss Christie, Britain's queen of crime story writers, will be a sprightly 80 years old Sept. 15.

Her books have sold perhaps 350 million copies, not including pirate editions. From her portable typewriter and her tape recorder have come more than 70 stories featuring such offbeat sleuths as the brainy Belgian Hercule Poirot and the sharp-eyed English spinster Jane Marple.

And her play, "The Mousetrap," is still running in London nearly 18 years after its West End opening.

The stories have been translated into 103 languages, 18 more than Shakespeare's works, according to a United Nations report.

She is a mixture of well-preserved good looks and charm, of brains and durability. Her hair, shot with silver and white, is still abundant. Her blue-gray eyes reflect her energetic spirit and good humor.

This is the way she has explained how she became a writer:

"My first love was music, and I studied piano and singing in Paris for two years. But to my great disappointment, I found I would never be good enough to be a professional."

"My high soprano voice was not strong enough for opera and my piano playing was not quite good enough. Also, I was too shy to stand up in public."

"Meanwhile, I had written some short stories and poems, just for fun. Then I wrote a novel. I read it again a few years ago. It was quite terrible, with mixed-up plots. Naturally, no one wanted it."

Then, during World War I, her elder sister told her: "I bet you can't write a detective story."

She took up the challenge and has been writing ever since. That first novel, "The Mysterious Affair at Styles," marked Poirot's debut. The inspiration came from some Belgian refugees who came to live near the Christie home in Devon, on the southwest coast.

She was the daughter of Frederick Alvah Miller of New York, "an amusing man," and an eccentric Englishwoman who tutored young Agatha at home. She could read at 4.

A first marriage, to Col. Archibald Christie, a handsome British flier, ended in divorce in 1928 after 14 years. In 1930, she met Prof. Max Mallowan, a British archaeologist, in Iraq. They married the same year. He is now a knight, so Miss Christie is properly known as Lady Mallowan.

"Max and I get on very well, considering he is so highbrow and I am so lowbrow," she will tell you. "He is not a great detective story fan."

Her daughter Rosalind, by the first marriage, "is the real critic—she can always put her finger on the vital spot."

"I often wonder whether people who read a book can know if it has been hard work or a pleasure to write," she says.

"Again and again, someone says to me: 'How you must have enjoyed writing so and so!' This about a book that obstinately refused to come out the way you wished, whose characters are sticky, the plot needlessly involved, and the dialogue stilted—or so you think yourself."

She has written romantic novels under the name of Mary Westmacott, and is the author of several plays besides "The Mousetrap," written originally as a radio play for the late Queen Mary's 80th birthday.

She doesn't mind her years: "Life is still good. Physically, rather difficult, but it's remarkably peaceful. And the next experience will be death—interesting to find out about it."

DAVID POLING

A Time For Action
By Church, Labor

David Poling

By DAVID POLING

The labor movement, like the Church, is part of the American Establishment. Surrounded by large memberships, endowed with billions of dollars, welcomed at the White House and the bank, the labor movement can safely ignore the poor, the black and the deprived. In other days it struggled bravely for economic justice and a broad application of brotherhood in the Republic.

The slighted, beaten and put-down laborer, whether he be in the mines, in the mill or the lumber camp, could look to courageous union leaders for attention and support. In some ranks of the Christian community he heard those who were alarmed at injustice and enraged with poverty. While the Church was generally absent from the picket line or the boycott, it did produce some able spokesmen and public leaders who supported legislation favorable to unions and the working family.

Much of the Christian's concern for labor (which bordered on idealism of farming and agriculture) was directly related to the life of Christ and the laboring disciples. Jesus moved easily among the laboring peasants, the road builders and shepherds and fishermen. That the Christian faith should always be at home with such people and their aspirations should be no surprise today. Many within the missionary movement, such as David Livingston and Wilfred Grenfell, spoke of a salvation that reached the whole man—his physical health, his civil rights, his just wages and his eternal redemption.

When Robert E. Speer wrote his report on overseas work, he noted some activities of certain "Christian" commercial organizations in the Far East. In one instance he printed part of an annual report that especially burned him:

"The profits of ... factory surpassed $1 million. For the past two years it has been running night and day with scarcely any intermission. The number employed is 2,500 and the following is the wage table per day:

'Men — 15-20 cents. Boys above 15 yrs., 10-15 cents. Girls above 15 yrs., 5-10 cents. Small boys and girls under 10 years, 3-10 cents.

"The working hours are from 5:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. No meals are provided by the factory.

"It will be seen that the company is in an exceptionally favorable position with an abundant supply of cheap labor to draw from. The annual profits have exceeded the total capital on at least three occasions."

LET'S GO BIRDWATCHING

By Emma Mae Leonhard

A Warbling Vireo Breaks the Silence
The early morning had been very empty of bird song. The Cardinal that had greeted the sunrise regularly every day during the dry period was silent. Doves were stinging with their mournful "coos." Even our House Sparrows were too lazy to chatter at each other and the world around them. As we started on our birdwatching trip at seven o'clock on August 29 and were driving along Lake Mauvalsterre, we not only heard the silence; we also felt it. The quietness of a premature autumn surrounded us. Then a sweet, leisurely warble floated down to us from the top of an oak tree. It was the unmistakable song of a warbling Vireo, the kind of song which fits the atmosphere of lazy summer days — the song of deep shade and warm suns. We liked it.

Again a Warbling Vireo Sang
We drove further to check the mudflat which had produced so many interesting shorebirds the week before. The picture had changed. The flat looked different, and it also was almost empty. The immature Little Blue Herons (pure white at this age), the American Egrets (large white birds), and the Great Blue Heron were absent. We missed their graceful movements. No whiteness relieved the drabness of mud. Even the common noisy Killdeer were only two, and they were saying nothing. Then out of a clump of grass ran a white-ish shorebird, a Sanderling; and here was something to watch. Even more impressive came again that same pleasant, unhurried warble of the Warbling Vireo, this time from the top of a tall maple tree. It broke the bird silence and emptiness, and again we liked it.

An Olive-sided Flycatcher
Since we were in an exploring mood, we left this comparatively birdless spot and headed on country roads toward the Meredosia area. Had the Dickcissels left us? The telephone wires or fences, where they usually sat and sang, were empty. They are among the first of our birds to leave us at the close of summer; perhaps they had sensed an early approach of autumn and hurried away. Then we caught sight of a different-looking bird in an upright position on a telephone wire; it was a large-billed, bull-headed, dark flycatcher. These identification marks, along with its dark-olive sides, proclaimed it an Olive-sided Flycatcher. What a surprise! The Olive-sided Flycatcher isn't common here, and it wasn't due to migrate through our territory for two more weeks. Had it also sensed an early approach of fall? At any rate, we were glad to be able to add it to our fall list of birds. And as we drove along, we did see two Dickcissels on telephone wires. A few were still loitering with us—but they were not singing. Flocks of Meadowlarks maneuvered silently in lush meadows. The world, again void of bird song, suggested an early approach of fall.

The Vireo Kept on Warbling
We moved on to Meredosia Bay to examine the mudflats. As we entered the quiet, tree-lined trail which leads to the bank of the bay, that smooth, running song of the Warbling Vireo, for the third time, donated silvery, musical notes to a quiet world. This time, however, a noisy bird from somewhere seemed to challenge the song monopoly which the vireo held in this woods. A loud, whistled, slurred "W he e e e p" penetrated the vireo's warble and then died away. And the Warbling Vireo kept on warbling.

As we approached the edge of the bay, we eagerly examined with our binoculars the distant narrow flat which extended into the water. In the haze it looked practically empty except for a gull-shaped bird with a black head, undoubtedly a Franklin's Gull, a good bird for this area.

Why We Were Surprised
As no other activity broke the quiet emptiness of the place, we retraced our steps. Upon arriving at the end of the trail, we were again serenaded by the Warbling Vireo. We were both pleased and surprised. Why surprised? Our Warbling Vireo during the spring pours forth a sprightly melody which speaks of promises and sunny hours. During its nesting season it repeats its triumphant song, according to some authorities, more than 4,000 times a day. At the approach of autumn we expect this faithful singer to join the other silent songsters, but it was still singing.

YOUR BIRTHDAY and MARRIAGE

By STELLA WILDER
SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6—
Born today, you are a direct, straightforward person who says what must be said and does what must be done. You possess high principles and live up to a standard of behavior calculated to keep those principles uncompromised. Because you are inclined, however, to expect others to live by the rules that you do, you can at times be intolerant at most, silly at best. Your insistence that what is right for you is right for all may bring you a great deal of trouble.
Because you are fearful of being thought an outsider, you often go to great pains to secure a place for yourself in whatever group interests you. Take care, however, that you don't saddle yourself with too many responsibilities in your effort to be thought necessary to the "club." You can learn how to belong without pouring all your energy into some demonstrable proof of your worth.
Your interest in others is both emotional and intellectual and goes a long way to draw people to you in good times and bad. Your ability to gain supporters in times of stress and strain does much to ease your way in the world—but take care that it doesn't do too much in the way of getting your work done for you or your chances of real success will vanish.
To find what is in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—
Much depends upon your choice of words. Don't approach unpopular subjects too lightly. Consult one who knows the ropes.
LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—
Monday—morning blues may cause a slow start—but you can make up for it by taking off at full speed after lunch.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—
Plan now for taking part in some phase of adult education this winter. Consider what you need for quick advancement in career.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—
Night studies have tremendous value for the Sagittarius who uses the daylight hours to do his "homework."
CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—
Progress in personal affairs is to be made this afternoon. Use morning hours to prepare yourself for making a good impression.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—
Strain and pressure must be lessened if you are to be able to make the gains that are possible for you. Seek a quiet place.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 21)—
Extreme care in driving is required today. Spend the evening getting better acquainted with those whose interests match yours.
ARIES (March 22-April 20)—
Further your ambitions today. Keep alert to the pitfalls inherent in your new plans and all should go well by evening.
TAURUS (April 21-May 21)—
Steer clear of anything that smacks of the clandestine. You can bring relationships out into the open without jeopardizing them.
GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—
Friends of long standing are to be completely trusted these days. Newer friends, however, must be given more time.
CANCER (June 22-July 23)—
The wise Cancer will know how to sidestep those issues which land him in hot water. Spare yourself all the argument you can.
LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—
Go after the advancement you want. This is an excellent time for increasing the possibility of material gain. Speak truthfully.

Handyman Woes... Here's the Answer
By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures
Q.—We have wooden shingles on the outside of our house. Most of them are in good condition, but a few have become warped and are slightly cracked. I have a number of shingles left over from the original installation and would like to replace the damaged ones. How do I go about it?
A.—You have to cut the nails which hold a damaged shingle in place. To do this, loosen the overlapping shingles, but only enough so that you can get under them with a hacksaw blade. Cut the nails under the bad shingle and you will be able to remove it. When you replace it with a new shingle, use roofing cement to hold it in place. If the old shingles were stained, you will have to stain the replacements otherwise they will have a too-new appearance and be conspicuous.
A.—Are those new self-sticking resilient floor tiles as good as the kind you install with a liquid adhesive. And is the installation procedure any different?
A.—The manufacturer of a vinyl asbestos tile, when questioned, assured me that the same ingredients are used in his adhesive-backed tile as in the other kind and that the quality and durability are the same. The installation is easier, of course, since all you do is remove the protective paper from the back of the tile and press it down. Follow the same method as for regular tile: Make sure the floor is clean and smooth, find the center of the room and start laying the tile from there, one quarter of a room at a time. Be sure the tile is correctly placed before you press it down because, once down, it is difficult to shift.
Q.—Removed the varnish finish from a table, but a reddish stain remains. Since I am going to paint the table, is it necessary to get out the stain, which doesn't seem to yield to sanding?
A.—You'd have to bleach the wood if you were going to give it a clear finish, but since you are going to paint it, coat the surface with aluminum paint. When that is dry, apply an undercoater, preferably of the same brand as the paint to be used as the finish coat. Then go ahead with the final coat.

Prodigal

The education lobby naturally does not take the public position that it is against educational reforms. But governors have told me that in practice, the widespread tendency is to resist change and to tell the states to keep their noses out of the educators' business.
One at least thinks, however, that a turn is coming. The old days of the great teacher shortage are largely ended in most places. The new word is surplus. Too many people are now getting into the field, some as a way of avoiding other kinds of commitment to an "establishment" they may disapprove of. In any event, the "seller's market" is disappearing as teachers scramble for jobs.
A popular western governor believes, too, that some educators are becoming acutely aware of the mounting annoyance felt over their money demands and may be ready to direct their energies more fully to money-saving, yet quality-producing, ideas.

University Of Wisconsin Officials Fear Renewed Bomb, Fire Violence

By ARTHUR L. SRB

ROBERT E. KESSLER

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — With school reopening only three weeks off, officials of the University of Wisconsin are fearful of a renewal of the bomb-and-fire violence that has plagued the sprawling campus here.

Gone, they feel, are the days of giant, though peaceful, protest marches.

"Now, we'll have 50 radicals bent on destruction," said a university spokesman.

Reopening is Sept. 21. Less than a month previous, however, on Aug. 24, a high-powered bomb exploded in the Army Mathematics Research Center, killing one person and injuring three others.

The bombing stunned, angered and disillusioned many persons in this college community of 170,000 where campus protests have prompted Gov. Warren P. Knowles to mobilize the National Guard three times since 1969 to restore or maintain order.

But not all were shocked by the blast.

"Anybody working for the Army is committing suicide," said a student who writes for an underground newspaper distributed on the 34,000-student campus of the university here.

"The game is not being played in a gentlemanly fashion anymore," he said. "Peaceful protests do no good."

An anonymous group, in an article printed in a circular, hailed the deed as an act against "American genocide throughout the world."

The explosion killed Robert Fassnacht, 33-year-old graduate student, and caused damage estimated at up to $6 million.

The bombing was the most violent in a series of protests which have included arson, window-smashing and an abortive attempt to bomb the U.S. Army munitions plant at nearby Baraboo on New Year's Day from a plane.

Who are the revolutionaries and their sympathizers? Police claim to know little about them.

The radical community in Madison, however, is believed to be made up of college drop-outs, high school runaways, transients who travel from one campus to another, as well as students enrolled at the university.

Radicals who might have actively sought publicity during antiwar protests three years ago have gone underground as demonstrations have escalated from street protests to hit-and-run guerrilla warfare.

The three students who have thus far been arrested for isolated arson attempts had no known organizational ties, police reported.

Publicly organized radical groups on the campus, including the Students for a Democratic Society—SDS—have been torn apart in recent years by dissension over revolutionary tactics and goals.

The defunct Wisconsin SDS chapter, which at one time boasted 300 members, split into fragments after the national group's 1969 Chicago convention.

There are five acknowledged members of the American Communist party and one member of the Progressive Labor Movement, a pro-Chinese Communist faction in the campus community.

But they are scorned by most radicals as "too corny and ideological."

The 500 black students have not staged a demonstration since a February 1969 classroom boycott. The school created a black studies department, one of the blacks' demands, but refused to accept an open admissions policy.

The one visible political group is the Young Socialist Alliance—YSA—a Trotskyite Communist organization which has 35 members.

The YSA is opposed to violence and the use of drugs, according to David Williams, a 21-year-old junior who is a member of the group's Executive Committee.

Gone from the Madison scene in recent months are the various factions of SDS, which broke into the Mother Jones Revolutionary League, the Weathermen, the White Panther party, and the Youth International party.

The Weatherman philosophy of street fighting failed to attract more than a handful of professed adherents in the campus community. A former member's explanation of the end of this organization may explain the disappearance of most radical groups on campus.

"We saw that if you're open and visible, you can be picked off by the police," he said recently.

"The Weathermen as a group is dead, but the Weathermen idea lives on."

"Look at the out-of-sight bombing of the Math Research Center," he explained. "If you go underground and work in 'affinity groups' of two or three freaks, the cops will never catch you."

Affinity groups are composed of a few radicals who live and operate together on a "buddy" system. Their limited size makes infiltration extremely difficult, police report.

"These affinity groups," said Wisconsin Atty. Gen. Robert Warren, "are developing a form of a domestic Ho Chi Minh trail, moving from campus to campus, infiltrating in their cause of limitless irrationality to kill, maim and destroy."

Clearer Picture For Prep Coaches

City Preps Two Weeks To Opener

By BUFORD GREEN Sports Editor

The three head high school football coaches in Jacksonville have a much clearer picture of the abilities of their charges than they did a week ago and are now concentrating on molding those players into a unit for the opening of the 1970 grid campaign less than two weeks away.

Both Jacksonville High School and Routt are working on their third week of practices this week, with ISD due to start its second week of work.

JHS coach Bob Kraushaar, Routt mentor Larry Pacotti and ISD boss Jim Bonds have narrowed their choices down to those players they feel will be carrying the load this campaign.

The Crims' Kraushaar figures he has approximately 25 players out of his squad of 44 who will be carrying the load.

In the offensive line Tom Scott (170), Jack Davis (170), Steve West (165), Al Winningham (160) and Richard Leake (160) have been operating at ends, Phil Birdsell (230), Tim Bone (210), Allen Pruitt (200) and Mike Heale (165), a junior transfer from Hillsboro at the tackles, Ted Wise (185), Steve Fitzsimmons (180), Wes Rust (185) and Willy Stewart (200) at guards and Steve McCullum (190), Steve Poole (190) and Rabjohns at center.

Kraushaar is not that certain on the defensive alignments, but so far has been using Wise, Birdwell, Pruitt, Bone, Scott, Davis, West and Rust in the line, Rabjohns, Fitzsimmons, McCullum, Flowers, and Jim Keating at linebackers and Ed Aring, Matt Friesen, Bostick and Flowers in the back field.

"The defense has been pleasing so far," comments Kraushaar. "The defense is probably ahead of the offense, which is generally true at this time of the year. We have probably worked longer on defense than usual. We need to get something going at quarterback and we have had trouble between the quarterback and center and the backs don't have the plays down."

Bonds has little trouble reeling off the names of those who will be seeing most of the action when the Tigers open play a week late on Sept. 25.

Through the first week of practice at ISD Bonds has been running "all-anything" Willie Forrest (180 pounds) and James Terry (143) at the halfbacks, senior Bob Benson (160) at fullback and junior Dale Gilliam (18) at quarterback. Kevin Leonard (146), Aire Buchanan (152) and Kent Calhoun (130) have also been getting work in the backfield.

In the line 221-pound freshman Dan Fitzpatrick has taken over the center spot, with Tom Davis (240) and Chuck Bright (180) at the guards, Ralph Holman (173) and Pedro Medina (208) at the tackles. The wide-open end spots have been manned by Gasy Hohenberry (131), Ellis Rodriguez (143), Ralph Shreeman (144) and Stan Maynard (164).

Mike Tempkin (165) has been used at defensive guard, with most of these working on offense expected to see double duty.

"The work of Fitzpatrick at center and Benson at halfback has been perhaps the most pleasing so far," says Bonds. "All the boys have been working hard and have good spirit and desire. The lack of experience and size is our biggest concern. After we get past the first ten or 11, we will be pretty small and will have no experience, a problem we will have all season. From tackle to tackle we should be in good shape, and the backfield should be in order."

Pacotti at Routt also has his probabilities narrowed down considerably. Pacotti has been using returning regular Jerry Johnson and Barney Flynn at right halfback, Mark Yording, who changed from end the final two games of last season, at fullback, returning regular Pat McGinnis, who gained over 800 yards as a junior, at left half and returning starter Steve Kaufmann at quarterback. Sophomore Tom Lockman has also been working at quarterback.

In the line it has been Jim Craddock at center, Lou Costa and Tom Sheehan at guards, Tom Pranger, Dave Eoff, changed from fullback and Mike Tennill at tackles and Paul Kaufmann, Jerry Green and Bob Ryan at the ends.

Defensively it should be Ryan and Kaufmann at the ends, Pranger and Tennill at tackles, Eoff at middle guard, Yording, Larry Simmons and Costa at linebackers and Green, McGinnis and Johnson returning intact in the backfield.

"With the maturity of about four sophomores after the start of the season, we think we will have 18-20 boys to depend upon," figures Pacotti. "The old blocking and tackling has been good, and Craddock filling the hole at center has been pleasing. The lack of depth and a good second unit to scrimmage against has been perhaps the biggest so far. We also lack real good size, but should have speed in the backfield and at guard."

"I have been impressed with the team spirit in practices to date."

Agans, Rouland Claim Features

Jim Agans of Springfield and Butch Rouland of Jacksonville walked off with the top prizes in the regular Saturday evening stock car races at Jacksonville Speedway.

Agans, who captured the late model feature in the challenge series at Pitsfield Speedway, moved into the lead halfway through the late model feature Saturday and nipped Don Carter of Hillsboro by a matter of a few yards. Following Carter in second were Stan Winkler, Jerry Roberts and Louie Jansen. Jacksonville's Phil

Howe led the first several laps of the race, finishing eighth. Rouland broke a three-week strangle hold on the hobo class feature with a narrow margin over Rich Rice of Carlinville. The remainder of the finish was unofficial at press time.

Carter had fast time for the night, with Joe Ross of Mechanicsburg capturing the fast heat. Rouland swept the first hobo heat, Ed Allee of Jacksonville the second and Rice the third.

C. C. Corbin of Granite City and Agans claimed the two late model heats.

Johnson's Homer Lifts Baltimore Over Boston 3-2

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Johnson's ninth home run of the season with two out in the eighth inning lifted the Baltimore Orioles to a 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Johnson connected off Ray Culp, shortly after right fielder Tony Conigliaro robbed leadoff batter Ellie Hendricks of a homer with a spectacular leaping catch.

The Orioles, who led 1-0 on Paul Blair's first-inning homer, tied the score at 2-1 in the seventh on a walk and singles by Hendricks, Terry Crowley and Johnson.

Boston scored in the first on two walks, a hit batsman and George Scott's single, and moved in front 2-1 in the fifth when Conigliaro doubled and scored on Mike Andrews' single.

Johnson's Homer Lifts Baltimore Over Tigers, 3-2

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim French's 14th inning single scored Aurelio Rodriguez with the winning run Saturday night as the Washington Senators edged the Detroit Tigers 3-2.

Rodriguez opened the 14th with a single and stole second. He moved up on an infield out and then trotted home on French's hit.

The Senator's had rallied with two runs in the seventh to tie the game against Mike Kilkenny, who had them shut out on three hits over the first six innings.

Rick Reichardt led off the seventh with a double off the fence in left center and scored on Rodriguez' double, his 30th of the season. Rodriguez stole third and after a walk to Greg Goosen, Rodriguez scored as Paul Casanova hit into a double play.

Boosters Club At JHS To Hold First Meeting

The first meeting for the Jacksonville High School Boosters Club for the 1970-71 season has been set for Thursday evening, September 10, at 7:30 at the high school, according to an announcement made by Boosters Club president, Jack Wise.

The program will include an introduction of the new members of the coaching staff by JHS athletic director and head football coach, Bob Kraushaar. The coaches of the cross country, soccer, varsity, sophomore, and freshman football teams will also be on hand to speak on the prospects for this year.

There will be a short business meeting with announcements of upcoming events and plans for this year.

Last year the club voted to extend memberships to women interested in joining the club. Anyone interested in becoming a member or in hearing the program is encouraged to attend the meeting, with a special invitation being extended to freshman parents.

Season tickets for football will be on sale.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Bailey drove in two runs, the first breaking a scoreless duel in the sixth inning, as the Montreal Expos defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 Saturday night behind the six-hit pitching of Bill Stoneman.

Stoneman, who had lost six in a row since June 18, gained his fifth victory and first against St. Louis in six decisions going back to last Sept. 7.

Frank Bertina, a southpaw making his second start for the Cardinals, was the loser. He gave up a double by Rusty Staub and a single by Bailey in the sixth, then was chased in a

Grote's Hit Lifts Mets By Cubs 5-3

CHICAGO (AP) — Ken Singleton's two-run single in the fourth inning and Jerry Grote's two-run double in the ninth powered the New York Mets to a 5-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday to further tighten the National League East's three-club pennant scrap.

The triumph, before a standing room Wrigley Field crowd, evened the crucial three-game set and set up Sunday's rubber game with the Mets trailing the second-place Cubs by only one-half game.

Grote's big double with two out in the ninth following Donn Clendenon's double and a walk to Joe Foy provided two important runs because Joe Pepton opened the Cubs' ninth with a single and Ernie Banks hit his 11th homer.

Before the Mets jumped on starter Ken Holtzman, 14-11, for three runs in the fourth the Cub ling out the first five New York hitters to match a National League record shared by five pitchers. Holtzman wound up with 10 strikeouts.

NEW YORK (AP) — Those closest to him called him Vin or Vinnie. Others used Mr. Lombardi.

But to all others, especially the players who toiled for him he was coach.

Ethel Kennedy, widow of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, let the world know she wore a Spiro T. Agnew watch but when she addressed the Washington Redskins vice president, she also called him "Coach."

Katharine Graham had met some of the most powerful figures in the world as publisher of the Washington Post, but when she was seated beside Lombardi at an exclusive social affair she became self-conscious that she had not engaged him in conversation.

"I am sorry, Mr. Lombardi," another guest recalled her saying, "I have wanted to talk to you all evening, but to tell the truth, I have been petrified at the idea."

The coach just laughed and laughed and laughed.

But such was the manner of Vince Lombardi, who was struck down by cancer and died last Thursday at the age of 57 after making a name for himself like none before him in professional football.

Lombardi will be buried Monday at Mt. Olivet, a cemetery in Middletown Township, near Red Bank, N.J., the home of his widow, Marie. Mass will be celebrated Monday morning by Terence Cardinal Cooke in St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City.

The son of an Italian immigrant butcher, Lombardi won fame as a football coach who won five National Football League and two world championships at little Green Bay, Wis.

But he was more than a coach. He was, as the Washington Post's columnist Shirley Povich described him, a football coach, lecturer, philosopher, tough guy, moralist and practicing patriot who without blush put his voice atop that of the crowd in singing the Star-Spangled Banner.

He was the love-hate image, but none did not respect him.

Green Bay defensive tackle Henry Jordan said the oft-quoted line: "Lombardi treats us all the same—like dogs."

And linebacker Dave Robinson compared Lombardi with his successor by saying: "Phil Bengston is the type of coach you'd cut your right arm off for. Vince is the type who would cut off your arm and give it to you."

But Tom Brown, defensive back at Green Bay, asked and received his release from the Packers to join Lombardi in Washington because, he said, "Lombardi taught us love and respect for one another at Green Bay."

Even Jerry Kramer, who rode the Lombardi mystique to its satirical heights in his book, "Instant Replay," volunteered to "unretire" to play for him in Washington.

In his book, Kramer said: "Coach Lombardi never takes second place when it comes to faith healers. He can just walk into a training room filled with injured players and say, 'What the hell's wrong with you guys? There's nobody in here hurt.' And the dressing room will clear immediately. And all the wounded will be healed."

Lombardi In Remembrance

By MURRAY OLDERMAN WASHINGTON, D.C. (NEA) — Vince Lombardi had it all for such a short time. Only 11 years, 1959 to 1970. Not even one-fifth of his life span.

But in professional football, which became America's most exciting sport, he made it like no one ever had. And the influence of his success extended beyond fun and games so that his name came up seriously for consideration as a vice presidential candidate.

Vince Lombardi was not always a nice man. In his single-mindedness, his absorption with winning football games, he was sometimes insensitive and brusque. But never malicious. There is the famous quote by Henry Jordan, his long-time defensive tackle on the Green Bay Packers: "He treats us all alike — like dogs."

Yet he wasn't inflexible. He personally was deeply religious, morally austere, but he was able to work compatibly with carousers and funsters and get them to respond to his figurative whip.

On the professional golf tour there is a 36-year-old rookie named Jesse Whittenton who had been an all-pro defensive back for Lombardi. Jesse had been married four times and known the good times. But during a tournament if he stays up until midnight it's an event. And Jesse is persistent despite the fact he failed to make the cut in his first 33 tournaments.

"It's Vince Lombardi's training," he says. "If you try anything hard enough, give it 100 per cent, it'll pay off. His record proves it."

His record is succinct enough — never a losing season in 10 years; five world championships in nine seasons at Green Bay; unprecedented three NFL titles in a row; two Super Bowl triumphs.

The philosophy of pro football veered back to the fundamentals of blocking and tackling because of him. He created a phrase for his era, "Run to daylight."

There was an urgency in his drive to win. He felt honestly it was vindication of the American ethic. The thing about Lombardi was that he had waited so long. He was 46 years old before he became a head coach above the high school level.

His emotional zeal also made people keep their distance, not quite sure of his mood of the moment. That was the public Vince Lombardi.

The private Vince Lombardi was actually a shy man who found it hard to look people directly in the eye, a little self-conscious about his slightly gawky looks, not always sure of his articulation. So one who tries to reflect what the brief, whirlwind era of Vince Lombardi meant is pulled by personal memories.

There's a draft meeting in Philadelphia on a cold January night in 1959, and Lombardi is there as an assistant coach of the New York Giants. You want to make an early train back to New York. "Wait an hour," says Lombardi. "I'll take a later train with you."

But you go without him. Two days later he's announced as head coach and general manager of the Green Bay Packers. He might have told you.

Another time in Toots Shor's, he's at the bar—he could be convivial. You introduce him to Eddie Arcaro. Vince is like a little kid. He has always been a racetrack buff.

The football writers meet in Chicago, and Vince is the chief speaker. It's a cynical crowd, but he pulls out all the homilies about old-fashioned virtues of pride, initiative, honesty. At the end, they're all on their feet applauding.

Memories of that Chicago speech return this past spring when society is in ferment and traditional values are challenged. You ask Vince for his views about young people, and he states them forthrightly.

Then he remembers how he was looking around for a school which his daughter could attend, and he found this little place in Florida. "There was a little lake in front of it," he recalls. "When I went up to introduce myself — it was a Catholic school — the Sister said to me, 'But Mr. Lombardi, I didn't see you walk across that water.' His teeth bare in a relaxed grin.

It's almost the last thing I remember him saying.

Pirates Sweep Two From Philadelphia

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates came from behind for a 6-4 victory over Philadelphia Saturday night after completing a 4-3 victory in a game suspended Friday night and opened up some breathing space for themselves in the hectic National League East race.

The two victories moved the Pirates 1½ ahead of second place Chicago and two up on the New York Mets, who are third. The Mets defeated the Cubs 5-3 Saturday.

The Phillies drew first blood in the regularly scheduled game when Denny Doyle doubled in the first inning, driving in Larry Bowa, who had singled.

The Pirates went ahead in the third when Al Oliver rapped a run-scoring double followed by an RBI-single by Willie Stargell. But Philadelphia came back and tied it up in the fourth on a triple by Don Money, scoring Tim McCarver.

In the fourth, Manny Sanguillen singled moved up on an infield out and scored on Bill Ma-zeroski's single.

Pittsburgh scored three more runs in the fifth on a triple by Stargell which scored Richie Hebner. Bob Robertson then walked and Sanguillen singled to left, scoring Stargell. Then Gene Alley singled to left and Robertson scored.

The Pirates went into Saturday's makeup game leading the Phils 4-1, then held on for their 4½ victory.

The game was carried over from Friday night when an automatic tarpaulin malfunctioned in the top of the seventh during a downpour.

Braves Sign Steve Barber

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Braves have signed left-handed pitcher Steve Barber to a major league contract.

Barber, 31, a veteran of 11 major league seasons, will join the club Monday to make the West Coast road trip.

He was a 20-game winner in 1963 for the Baltimore Orioles and started this season with the Milwaukee Brewers, but was released and signed by the Chicago Cubs. He was signed by the Braves' Richmond farm club after being released by the Cubs.

Barber's record at Richmond was 7-1, with a 3.62 earned run average.

Vikings Ready Without Kapp

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Quarterback Joe Kapp is leading the lonely life of the holdout in Canada while the Minnesota Vikings, the team he led to the National Football League championship last year, prepares for the 1970 season without him.

"I got nothing to say," the 32-year-old Kapp told The Associated Press Friday when finally located in the offices of a Vancouver real estate firm with which he is connected. "I don't even want to talk about the weather."

"I'm just here handling some business. I've got a little land up here. Talk to my lawyer. He's handling the whole thing." Kapp is asking $1.25 million in a five-year contract from the Vikings. He hasn't talked with Jim Finks, Vikings general manager, since April, and a Vikings spokesman said Friday the team is prepared to play this season without Kapp.

Kapp's lawyer, John Elliott Cook of Glenbrook, Nev., said, "There's not a word going on. Not a contract. This thing is headed right straight into a dead end."

Kapp spent 45 minutes on the telephone with Cook Friday, but the attorney wouldn't disclose the nature of the conversation. Kapp said he might fly to California this weekend, but he refused to say where, or why. The Vikings haven't disclosed their offer to Kapp, but reportedly won't consider his $1.25 million demand.

For at least the last two weeks, Kapp has stayed at a farm owned by a business partner, Peter Wall, 15 miles south of Vancouver. The hard-running quarterback, who led California to the 1959 Rose Bowl, then played in the Canadian Football League before joining the Vikings in 1967, looked tanned and in relatively good shape when interviewed in the real estate office.

He appeared relaxed but would not allow himself to be photographed, and left in a Cadillac through a garage exit.

The Vikings this week acquired from the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Kent Nix as the fourth man in their signal-calling corps. Gary Cuozzo, an eight-year veteran, has been running the team. He's backed up by Bob Lee, a second-year man, and rookie Bill Cappelman from Florida.

A p p reportedly received $100,000 each of the last three years.

Austrian Killed In Grand Prix

MONZA, Italy (AP) — Jochen Rindt, whose wife was in the pits clocking his final run, was killed Saturday when his Lotus Ford careened off the Monza track in a practice run for Sunday's Grand Prix.

"Last year I had a lot of bad luck but this year it has changed," said Rindt just hours before he took to the track in a final tune-up for the race that could have brought him the world driving championship after several jinx-plagued seasons.

The touse-haired veteran who could become the first man in history to win the Formula One driving title posthumously, swerved off the course at the dangerous Parabolica Curve. The car is at the end of two straightaways where the cars hit speeds over 180 m.p.h.

When Rindt jumped into the car before making his final run, he left his Finnish wife, Nina, in the pits to clock his time. Mrs. Rindt did not see her husband again until his body was brought to a Milan hospital following his death.

"I saw the car braking before the beginning of the Parabolica bend," said Angelo Rosso, a national policeman on duty in the area. "Then it swerved to the left, hitting the guard rail. The car bounced back to the center of the track, overturning."

The car did not catch fire. Rindt immediately was brought to the track's first aid station, where Dr. Piero Carassai tried to revive him.

"His heart had stopped so I tried heart massage," said Dr. Carassai. "He seemed to react, and opened an eye. But he was dead soon after that."

The doctor said Rindt had broken his trachea and had also suffered a crushed thorax. His left leg also was broken.

USC Could Have Repeat In Far West

(One of a Series)

By JACK STEVENSON

Associated Press Sports Writer

A year ago, Southern California's Trojans beat Stanford by two points and UCLA by two points and the sum of four points over their toughest Pacific-8 rivals put USC into the Rose Bowl a fourth straight time.

For 1970, the Trojans have their backfield returning intact, some other fine offensive performers and a defense which had to be rebuilt around Charlie Weaver and Tody Smith, the returnees from the "Wild Bunch" front line which made life miserable for opposing quarterbacks.

Now they go into a season many believe will be the year of the quarterback all around. USC has Jimmy Jones, UCLA has Dennis Dummit and Stanford has Jim Plunkett, the second team All American selection of 1969.

Jerry Frei, the coach at Oregon, observed, "It looks as if everybody is going to have a great offense. There are more quarterbacks and running backs returning than I've seen in a while. But, the championship could wind up going to the team with the best defense."

Coach John McKay of USC cuts the line a little finer, saying, "If you don't play pass defense, you're going to get beat."

What's true in the Pacific-8 also is true in the Western Athletic Conference.

Arizona State, 8-2 in 1969, has its quarterback, Joe Spagnola, returning. Arizona has Brian Linstrom who set conference sophomore total offense and passing records last year. Wyoming has Gary Fox and Ed Synakowski, who alternated a year ago. Utah has Gordon "Scooter" Longmire, a transfer from Michigan State.

The Sun Devils of Arizona State won the conference title last year when they played one more conference game than Utah which also had an 8-2 overall mark and which also lost but one WAC game.

Sports writers and sportscasters in the Rocky Mountain area tabbed Arizona State to repeat as champion with Utah second, Arizona third and Wyoming fourth.

Southern California will be hard pressed to retain its "Best in the West" title. The Trojans must nevertheless figure high in the national ratings. They placed third in The Associated Press poll of a year ago.

In addition to Jones, they have flanker Bobby Chandler, fullback Charlie Evans and tailback Clarence Davis returning. From the frosh, they have fullback Sam Cunningham, tailback Rod McNeill and quarterback Mike Rae.

Weaver, at 214 and 6 foot 2, leads the Trojans' defensive charge and could be the Trojans' No. 1 candidate for post-season honors.

Stanford's bid to halt the dominance of the Los Angeles teams rests with Plunkett, a 6-foot 3 senior weighing 204. A year ago, he completed 197 passes in 336 attempts for 2,373 yards and 20 touchdowns.

He added 113 yards rushing for 2,788 total offense and the totals for passing yardage, touchdowns and total offense all were Pac-8 records.

What Coach John Ralston can assemble defensively could prove another major factor in the destinies of the Indians.

At UCLA, where the Bruins came from a dismal 1968 season to finish 8-1-1, Coach Tommy Prothro has 22 lettermen and only six starters from 1969. An injury forced fullback Mickey Cureton out for the season and may have ended his career.

At Oregon, Frei has 14 starters back and Oregon State has 31 lettermen and no one takes either lightly this time around. Running back Bobby Moore could be the Oregon standout while Dee Andros at Oregon State fields a predominately junior team.

Sophomore running back Isaac Curtis, a 9.3 sprinter, could make a big difference at California while at Washington and Washington State, they are 15 and 13 starters returning, respectively.

The Pacific Coast Athletic Association, which came into being a year ago, could have a rugged battle with San Diego State and Long Beach State in the favored positions. The latter has Little All America Leon Burns, the leading collegiate rusher of 1969, spearheading the attack.

In the Big Sky Conference, Montana seeks to defend its championship but like runner-up Weber State, the Grizzlies must find a lot of replacements for graduated seniors.

The independent Air Force could again be a factor as Coach Ben Martin seeks to have another winning team.

Ohio State Favored In Pre-Season Poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN

Associated Press Sports Writer

Ohio State is the choice to dethrone Texas as the national college football champions. Nineteen of the 36 writers and broadcasters who voted in The Associated Press' preseason poll picked the Buckeyes to recapture the crown they lost to the Longhorns last season. Texas received seven first-place ballots, Southern California got six while Arkansas, Mississippi, Penn State and Louisiana State each got one top vote.

Ohio State was barreling toward a second consecutive championship last season when a funny thing happened. Michigan beat the Buckeyes in the season wind-up and dropped them all the way to fourth place.

Texas climbed to the top by nipping Arkansas 15-14 in the showdown shootout for No. 1 and surviving a Notre Dame threat in the Cotton Bowl to complete an 11-0 campaign.

In the pre-season tabulation, Ohio State piled up 646 points to 599 for Texas. Southern Cal was third with 551. Rounding out the Top Ten were Arkansas, 378; Mississippi, 361; Notre Dame, 341; Penn State, 308; Michigan, 237; Nebraska, 216, and Stanford, 201.

The Top Ten in the final 1969 poll were Texas, Penn State, Southern Cal, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Michigan and Louisiana State.

"This Ohio State team should be as good—a little better than last year," says Coach Woody Hayes. "We've got more good sophomores than last year. We've got eight or 10 sophomores who could be in the starting line-up before the season is over. They should make us stronger."

In the Second Ten, the 1970 forecasters put Missouri, Louisiana State, Houston, Kansas State, Florida, Alabama, South Carolina, UCLA, Arizona State and a three-way tie for 20th among Auburn, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

Last year's Second Ten consisted of Nebraska, Houston, UCLA, Florida, Tennessee, Colorado, West Virginia, Purdue, Stanford, Auburn and Toledo (tie).

The Top Twenty teams, with first-place votes in parentheses, last season's records and total points. Points tabulated on basis of 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

1. Ohio State (19)	8-1 646
2. Texas (7)	11-0 599

4. Arkansas (1)	9-2 378

Lanny Wadkins New Amateur Golf Champion

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins, a sandy-haired Virginian, sank a 20-foot putt to wrap up a final round par 70 Saturday and won the 70th U.S. Amateur Golf Championship after third-round leader Tom Kite Jr. of Austin, Tex., took two double bogeys on closing holes. Wadkins had a one-under-par 279 for the tournament.

Kite matched Wadkins' birdie 4 on the 18th by making a 10-foot putt and finished one stroke behind, with a closing 73 and a 2-hole score of 280 on the par-70, 6,496-yard Waverley Country Club course.

The two collegians, playing together, were tied for the lead several times during the day and were well ahead of their nearest competitors. Wadkins, 20, a Wake Forest star from Richmond, Va., grabbed the lead from Kite when he parred the 15th and Kite took a double bogey 6.

Wadkins' 279 was a record low for the amateur and gave him, besides his first U.S. Amateur title, a third important victory this summer. He earlier won the Southern and Western tournaments.

Three players, including 1966 champion Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., finished tied for third with 284. Cowan shot a 72 Saturday while Jim Gablesen of Atlanta had a 73 and Jim Simmons of Butler, Pa., had a 74.

Yugoslavia Tips Gonzales In U.S. Tennis Open

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Nicola Pilic, a tennis gypsy from Yugoslavia with a temper almost as quick as his racket, cut down Pancho Gonzales 4-6, 6-2, 7-6, 7-5 in the third round of the U.S. Open Championships Saturday, and then apologized.

"I am so sorry, Pancho always is my idol," said the tall good-looking circuit rider from behind the Iron Curtain. "I win because I am 10 years younger. Pancho is not as strong and as fast as he once was."

The age difference actually is 11 years. Pilic is 31, a racket craftsman who has beaten the best, and Pancho, once the master of all he surveyed, is a slowling 42.

Gonzales blamed his defeat on the soft center court turf.

"The center court always is too soft because the officials won't let anybody play on it before the tournament," he complained. "They want it to look nice and pretty."

"It's like sand. You can't get a firm footing. The ball doesn't bounce. Nikki hit volleys that died on the ground."

Pilic, a notorious actor on the court, also won the battle of tempers. He displayed an even disposition—mad at everybody except Pancho, whom he loves and loves to beat.

He carried on a verbal war with the pro-Gonzales fans, disputed line calls, barked at ball boys and hit balls petulantly into the stands. Gonzales won the racket-throwing contest, tossing his aluminum weapon 20 yards after dropping the third set.

Pilic entered the men's round with Arthur Ashe Jr., America's chief hope of thwarting Rod Laver's bid for a second straight title; Holland's scrappy Tom Okker and Roy Emerson of Australia.

Ashe, seeded seventh, trounced Roy Barth of San Diego, Calif., 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 and by a quirk of the draw qualified next to meet Okker, the man he beat in winning the first U.S. Open in 1968. Okker thrashed Jim Osborne of Honolulu 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

Emerson, six times Australian champion and winner of two U.S. titles as an amateur, overpowered young Bobby McKinley, of St. Ann, Mo., Chuck's kid brother, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1.

Margaret Smith Court, the big, strong Australian girl who is bidding for the first grand slam sweep of major women's titles since the late Maureen Connolly achieved the feat in 1953, settled a week-old score quickly on the center court.

Mrs. Court needed only 27 minutes to eliminate Patti Hogan of LaJolla Calif., 6-1, 6-1 in a second round women's match.

In the featured women's match, eighth-seeded Judy Dalton of Australia bounced back from a mid-match slip for a 7-6, 6-6, 6-4 triumph over Kristy Pigeon of Danville, Calif. The blonde Miss Pigeon fought off three match points before bowing.

New Manager Gives Chisox Young Image

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox, following a growing major league trend to pluck managerial talent from the minor leagues, have a new pilot who bridges the generation gap.

Chuck Tanner, named Friday to supplant released Don Gutierrez, said Saturday:

"The mod style of some young players doesn't bother me. I'm just interested in their ability. I don't care how long their hair is if they can hit 300. They can even put on a wig like Joe Pepitone."

Tanner, 42, has created a successful nine-season minor league managerial career by guiding the Hawaiian Islanders to the current Pacific League playoffs with the best record in all of baseball this season, 98-48.

Thus Tanner, signed from the California Angels system along with Roland Hemond who becomes director of Sox player personnel, joins the swelling ranks of non-big name minor league graduates now at the helms of big league clubs.

Most of them spent many seasons building reputations in the bus-rider circuits, including Frank Lucchesi of the Phils (19 years in the minors); San Francisco's Charley Fox (13); Baltimore's Earl Weaver (12); Oakland's John McNamara and Milwaukee's Dave Bristol (9 each), and Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson (5).

Few, however, were confronted by the task facing Tanner, former outfielder for the Braves, Cubs and Indians.

The White Sox are wallowing at a pace more feeble than even the most recent expansion clubs, both in the standings and at the gate.

Tanner, manager of the Year in the Texas League with El Paso in 1968 and in the PCL this season, said a mouthful at Spokane when signed by Sox general manager Stu Holcomb: "It will be a challenge to take this job."

Tougher Defense Seen For Illini

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — In short: improved speed and quickness at the linebacking and along the defensive line should make the University of Illinois tougher defensively in 1970.

Sophomores are everywhere (10 of 19 defensive line candidates, 4 of 6 linebackers), but in most every case, the coaching staff feels that the speed, quickness and enthusiasm of the first-year men will make up for sophomore mistakes.

The defensive line has lettermen at every position. However, the backup roles are manned almost exclusively by sophs.

At end a pair of juniors — Glenn Collier of Danville and Bob Bucklin of Wheaton — lettered last year and are expected to start in the opener against Oregon, Sept. 19. Collier is small as defensive ends go (6-2, 197) but he makes up for size with his agility.

Penn State May Lose Usual Spot

(One of A Series)
By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

There's very little the West Virginia football team cherishes more than a victory over Penn State and this year the Mountaineers will have a little extra incentive when they invade University Park, Pa., on Oct. 31.

The university recently was admitted to the Eastern College Athletic Conference and will be eligible for the Lambert Trophy, symbol of Eastern supremacy, which has just about become Penn State's personal property over the last three years.

Beating Penn State, however, which West Virginia hasn't managed to do in 14 tries since 1955, won't be easy even though the Nittany Lions lost 11 starters, including seven regulars and two All-Americans from a defensive unit that Coach Joe Paterno calls "perhaps the best in the history of college football."

Other Eastern teams that will get a chance to upend the Lions are Navy, Boston College, Syracuse, Army and Pitt, and the last four have designs of their own on the Lambert hardware.

So, of course, do the other ECAC Division I teams—Boston U., Buffalo, Colgate, Connecticut, Holy Cross, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Rutgers, Temple, Villanova and William & Mary and the eight Ivy League schools—but none is considered strong enough to pose a threat.

"We're going to have to get old fast," says Paterno. "We're going to be young in key spots on defense and until we are sound on defense we won't be a great football team."

"We can throw and catch. We have three quarterbacks who can throw the ball, lots of players who can catch it and run with it. We have a skilled offense."

Despite Paterno's throwing quarterbacks, it's the runners who scare people. Burly Franco Harris and slick Lydell Mitchell form a potent 1-2 ground punch and they'll be running behind a veteran line. And in Jack Ham, Paterno has a great linebacker around whom to rebuild the defense.

Bobby Bowden, West Virginia's new coach, hopes to improve on the Mountaineers' 1969 record, which will take some doing, considering they capped a 10-1 season with a Peach Bowl triumph over South Carolina. The only loss, incidentally, was to Penn State.

The Mountaineers think they have the best returning backfield in the country in quarterback Mike Sherwood, halfbacks Bob Gresham and Eddie Williams and fullback Jim Braxton. Bowden has 20 other returning lettermen and eight of them were starters, including 242-pound, linebacker Dale Farley, who has the pro scouts drooling. Syracuse, which must play Penn State and West Virginia on the road, was given a shot at the Lambert but the Orangemen must regroup their forces after a dispute between seven black players and Coach Ben Schwartzwalder. The seven were suspended by Schwartzwalder after boycotting spring practice. Last week, they refused to sign a statement of commitment to the coaching staff and were dropped again. Meanwhile, the 66 white members of the team demonstrated their support for the coaching staff.

If the Orangemen ever get down to football, they have some imposing athletes on hand, including defensive tackle Joe Ehrmann, touted as the best in the land and only a junior. Ehrmann heads 11 lettermen from a defensive unit which ranked fifth nationally a year ago, even though Syracuse only had a 5-5 season.

On offense, Syracuse will have an experienced quarterback—two, in fact—for the first time in years. They'll be complemented by a sensational sophomore runner in Marty Januszkiewicz, who scored two touchdowns in the 1969 opener, then was injured for the season and given an additional year of eligibility.

Boston College has a potent offense, with Frank "Red" Harris throwing, Fred Willis running and Gary Guenther blocking. Pitt, with two all-star candidates in linebacker Ralph Clinch and defensive tackle Lloyd Weston, got started on the road back to respectability with a 4-6 record in 1969. The Panthers could do better this time.

IBSSS Looks For Another Good Season

Another outstanding year appears to be in the offing for the Illinois Braille and Sight Saving School Fall track squad.

Last year the Warriors of coach Bill Gross posted an undefeated campaign and added their second straight North Central Association of Schools for the Blind Conference crown.

Gross, who expects his charges to finish unbeaten again and make it three in a row in the loop meet Oct. 10 at Vinton, Iowa, points to Bob Leveston, last year's total points leader and triple winner in the conference meet, and Chuck McClintock and Howard Dehning to be the leaders this season.

Performers this year are Leveston, in the 50, 75, hop, step and jump and basketball throw; McClintock, in the three consecutive jumps, high jump, standing broad jump and basketball throw; Howard Thomas in the 50, 75, hop, step and jump, standing broad jump and high jump; Jay Talley in the shot put, standing broad jump and mile tandem (one blind boy and one partially sighted boy together); Dan Thompson in the mile tandem, Jeff Sipkin in the 600 yard run, Chris Mulkin in the 600, Larry Krejci in the 600, Steve Howells in the 50, 75, three consecutive jumps and mile tandem, Charles Mattson in the 50, 75, shot put and standing broad jump, Bob Bearce in the 50, 75, high jump and shot, Dehning in the 50, 75, shot, three jumps and hop, step and jump David Gaylen in the dashes, shot and basketball throw and Al Spann in the dashes, basketball throw, hop, step and jump and three jumps.

Female Griddler Gets Suspension

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Pat Palinkas took her suspension from the Orlando Panthers football team in stride Friday and said she would be rooting for her teammates from the stands.

"I'm a football player," said Pat, "and I missed practice ... I understand that I must play by the rules."

The 23-year-old placekicker was suspended Thursday by Orlando general manager Paul Masey just hours after she survived the cut and earned a place on the Orlando roster for the regular season—the first women ever to be named to a pro football team.

"This suspension is for only a week," said Pat.

THE CLASSIC drop-back quarterback will be replaced in the 1970s by the more mobile kind—like Oakland's Daryle Lamonica, left, and New York Giants' Frank Tomarken, right—both of whom have been known to do some running when receivers are covered.

Coach Charles Stone opens his fifth campaign at Southwestern with a squad of between 85 and 90 players.

Brooks Robinson Has Five Hits In 8-6 Decision

BOSTON (AP) — Brooks Robinson collected five straight hits including a pair of homers powering the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox Friday night despite Tony Conigliaro's second grand-slam homer in four days.

Robinson singled to ignite a three-run second, hit his 16th home run to lead off the fourth, singled in the sixth and belted a three-run shot into the left field screen to snap a 5-5 tie in the seventh. He also doubled in the ninth.

Mike Cuellar, Baltimore's 21-game winner, who yielded Conigliaro's grand slam, failed to get through the first inning in a bid for a seventh straight victory.

7 Lettermen Back In Camp For Havana

HAVANA — Seven returning lettermen will form the nucleus of this season's Havana High school football squad, as Jack O'Brien starts his third season directing the Ducks.

Last time around the Ducks posted a 2-4-1 standing, 1-3-1 in the Spoon River Conference. A squad of 58 boys has been working out in preparation for the Sept. 18 opener at home against Farmington.

Returning lettermen are 170-pound senior tackle Greg Pichat, 205-pound junior tackle Bob Stinauer, called an outstanding performer by O'Brien; 150-pound senior guard Tim Griffin, 205-pound junior tailback Jeff Bonnett, who punts and kicks off; 160-pound senior halfback Jerry O'Bryant, the club's top ballcarrier; 160-pound junior quarterback Marshal Gilson and 185-pound senior fullback Dave Brown.

Best prospects among the non-lettermen in camp are middle linebacker John Lane, called the team's top defensive player; and end Kevin Boggs.

O'Brien picks Macomb, because of good backfield speed, and Beardstown, because of big, strong linemen, the teams to beat in this year's Spoon River Conference struggle.

Gibbs' Hot Bat Allows Yankees To Nip Tribe 3-2

NEW YORK (AP) — Jake Gibbs, who homered in the third inning knocked in the winning run with a seventh-inning single Friday night to give the New York Yankees and rookie Steve Kline a 3-2 victory over Cleveland.

Gibbs singled home Jerry Kenney, who opened the inning with a single off Rich Hand, was sacrificed to second and took third on a fly ball.

Gibbs' homer put the Yankees ahead 2-1 but Duke Sims singled home the tying run in the sixth. Chuck Hinton drove in a first-inning run with a single and New York tied it in the second on a walk, single and infield out.

Cubs Take Opener Of Key Series 7-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Randy Hundley's two-run single with the bases loaded in the seventh inning broke a 3-3 tie Friday and led the Chicago Cubs to 7-4 victory over the New York Mets in a key struggle in the torrid National League East race.

Hundley also doubled across the first Cubs' run in the second inning of the tense opener of a three-game set before a Wrigley Field Ladies Day crowd of 39,981, including 29,327 paid.

In the decisive seventh, a walk, Joe Pepitone's single, a bases-filling intentional walk by reliever Ron Taylor set the stage for Hundley's big blow. Pinch-hitter Paul Popovich's sacrifice fly scored the third run of the inning.

Art Shamsky's three-run homer off Cubs starter Bill Hands fashioned a 3-3 tie after New York starter Nolan Ryan's wildness enabled the Cubs to pick up single runs in the second, third and fourth innings.

Shamsky's ninth homer followed Wayne Garrett's walk and the second of three singles by Cleon Jones.

Bob Miller, newly acquired from the Chicago White Sox, put down a Mets threat in the eighth when New York scored on Garrett's double, Jones' third single and a throwing error on pinch-hitter Ken Singleton's fly to right, scoring Garrett from third.

Jim Hickman's 30th homer got that run back for Chicago in its half of the inning.

Ryan, 6-10, who had whipped the Cubs three times, got off the hook when he was replaced by Danny Frisella in the fifth. Hands also failed to finish, being lifted for a pinch-runner after doubling to open the Cubs sixth.

Maddox Sparks Detroit Past Washington 6-3

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elliott Maddox doubled home two runs after the tying run scored on an error as the Detroit Tigers scored four times in the ninth inning and beat Washington 6-3 Friday night.

Singles by Al Kaline and Jim Northrup started the uprising against Darold Knowles, 2-13. With one out, third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez fielded Don Wert's grounder but his throw to the plate hit Kaline in the back. One out later Maddox doubled and scored on Ike Brown's single.

Frank Howard drove in all the Washington runs with a two-run double in the seventh and a tie-breaking single in the eighth. Detroit ... 100 000 014—6 9 0 Washington ... 000 020 010—3 4 1

Wynn, Houston Notch 7-3 Count Over Dodgers

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Wynn singled to start a four-run uprising in the eighth, then singled home the final run of the inning as the Houston Astros beat Los Angeles 7-3 Friday night.

Wynn and Cesar Cedeno opened the eighth with singles and Jim Brewer relieved starter Sandy Vance. Wynn scored and Cedeno took second on a wild pitch and another wild pitch moved Cedeno to third. Jesus Alou brought him home with a sacrifice fly and after a walk, Joe Morgan doubled across another run and scored on Wynn's second hit.

Los Angeles ... 010 200 000—3 10 3 Houston ... 010 020 04x—7 10 1 Vance, Brewer (8), Lamb (8) and Haller; Wilson, Gladding (9) and Howard, Edwards (9). W—Wilson, 8-5. L—Vance, 5-6. HR—Los Angeles, Haller, (9).

Hayes acknowledged too many seniors could be a problem, too. "You never have a great team unless the seniors are playing their best ball—every one of them," he said. He has more seniors on the squad, 28, than of any of his previous 19 Ohio State eleveners.

His job will be to keep his team from becoming complacent. Ohio State teams have won 125 games, lost 42 and tied seven during his tenure.

McLain Will Have Hearing On Status

NEW YORK (AP) — Detroit pitcher Denny McLain was ordered Friday by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to appear in New York next Wednesday for a hearing on his probationary status and not to report to the Tigers until then.

The commissioner, in issuing his statement did not use the word suspended in taking the action against McLain but in effect until a hearing is held the problem-plagued hurler cannot pitch.

McLain, suspended earlier this season by Kuhn and placed on a probationary status, after investigation disclosed he had attempted to become a partner of gamblers allegedly involved in bookmaking operations.

Ohio State Remains In Loaded Class

(One of A Series)
COLUMBUS, Ohio — A tipoff on the strength of Ohio State's 1970 football squad is the opinions of National Football League scouts.

"Eleven, and as many as 13 players off this team will go in the first three draft rounds," a scout said after viewing the Buckeyes' spring practices.

He ticked off the names of Jim Stillwagon and Jack Tatum, Tim Anderson and Mike Sensibaugh from the defense.

Offensively, the top draftees will be Rex Kern, Leo Hayden, John Brockington, Bruce Janowski, Jan White, Larry Zelina and Ron Maciejowski.

That group is part of the 18 two-year lettermen who played on the 1968 national champions and Rose Bowl winners over Southern California.

They are also the reason the Buckeyes will launch a strong bid for fourth national and seventh Big Ten Conference titles in 1970.

The Buckeyes wound up with an 8-1 record, a league co-title with Michigan and No. 4 in The Associated Press poll in 1969 after falling at Michigan 24-12 in the last game.

"This team should be as good—a little better than last year," Coach Woody Hayes said. "The sophomores (8 or 10) could start before the end of the season" should make us stronger."

Three newcomers, offensive guard John Hicks and defensive tackles George Hasenhorst and Shad Williams, will crack the veteran starting lineup for the Sept. 26 home opener with Texas A&M.

The Buckeyes, if they whip complacency, seem to have all the weapons.

Kern, an oft-injured senior, gives the team exceptional leadership and running and passing at quarterback. Brockington, who has taken over for All-America Jim Otis at fullback, and Hayden provide the power thrust.

"Nobody has better receivers than we do," Hayes said, mentioning Jankowski, White and Zelina.

The defense again will be led by middle guard Stillwagon and cornerback Tatum. It figures to be another quick, quick-pursuing bunch.

Hayes acknowledged too many seniors could be a problem, too. "You never have a great team unless the seniors are playing their best ball—every one of them," he said. He has more seniors on the squad, 28, than of any of his previous 19 Ohio State eleveners.

His job will be to keep his team from becoming complacent. Ohio State teams have won 125 games, lost 42 and tied seven during his tenure.

Houk Boosts Munson As Top Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — With a month to go in the 1970 baseball season, the American League's Rookie of the Year sweepstakes shapes up as a three-man race.

From Ralph Houk's point of view, however, it's a one-man race.

The New York Yankees' manager concedes that outfielders Roy Foster of Cleveland and Billy Conigliaro of Boston are having outstanding freshman years. But he expects his own man, catcher Thurman Munson, to capture the AL rookie award, which never has been won by a receiver.

"I don't see how he can miss," Houk said of Munson, 23, whose .297 batting average is high for Yankee regulars. "Who else is there? Just two other guys. If I got on the phone right now, how long do you think it would take me to trade Munson for either one of them even up?"

"Foster played quite a while in the minors," Houk said. "And he has those short fences to shoot at in Cleveland. Conigliaro's had some minor league experience, too, and he also plays in a hitters' park."

"But Munson didn't even have a full year in Triple A. He caught less than 100 professional games before this year. We knew he was a good catcher, but we didn't know how good he would be with the stick. He's having a terrific year for a fellow with so little experience."

The Yankees signed Munson, a compact, 5-foot-11 line-drive hitter, out of Kent State University two years ago. He was their No. 1 selection in the June, 1968 free agent draft.

Defensively, he ranks alongside the best receivers in the game. He leads the majors in assists by a catcher and has thrown out 38 of 65 would-be base-stealers, including 18 of the last 25.

Maury Wills

White And Wills Cited By Aaron

NEW YORK (NEA) — "With in the next year, two at the most, there will be a black manager in the big leagues," said Henry Aaron of the Atlanta Braves.

"If I were in a position to choose a manager, I would not want to pick a black man just because he's black and just because there has never been one in the major leagues.

"But I do think many are qualified. My first choice: It would be Bill White."

Why White? "He's smart and knows baseball," said Aaron. "But, most important, I think he has a sense of how to relate to the personnel around him."

Aaron said his second choice would be Maury Wills.

"Maury had to learn to do things that Willie or Ernie or me picked up naturally, because of our born abilities," Aaron continued. Willie Mays, Ernie Banks and Aaron have all been considered prime prospects as managers. All are in the twilight of their careers, as is Wills. White is retired.

"So far," said Aaron, "no club owner has had the guts to hire a black manager. But it's coming. Bowie Kuhn's statement recently that owners should begin to prepare black players for places on their clubs after they retire as players was great."

"I don't know—it wouldn't be fair for me to say—which team would hire a black manager first. I don't know the owners that well. I really don't know what Judge Hofheinz of Houston is like, for example."

He was asked if Atlanta, a town in the South, could conceivably be the first.

"It's not as unlikely as it sounds," said Aaron. "Atlanta is as enlightened as any city in the North. I've had as much racial trouble in New York, for example, as I have had in Atlanta. The only bad thing about Atlanta is that it's got Georgia hung on the end of it."

Aaron criticized the way some managers have moved from one team to another, creating a sort of club. Two managers in particular he pointed out in this respect are Harry Walker of Houston and Gene Mauch of Montreal.

"They're both lousy," said Aaron. "Walker went to Houston and screwed everything up. The only good thing he did was teach Matty Alou to be a butcher-boy hitter."

"And Mauch. I'll never forget 1964 when he had a big lead with the Phillies and blew it. I remember how he panicked in the stretch. He was three or four games ahead and pitched Bunning on Friday, then pitched him again on Sunday."

Aaron, 36, is having another fine season. He said he would not think of managing until he's through as a player.

"But," he added, "you never know when that'll be. One day my legs might just plain give out."

"And I do get tired at the end of the season. And sometimes I have to talk to myself, to keep myself psyched up, when I go to the plate."

"When I start answering myself, then I'll know it's time to retire."

Says Clay Bout Set In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Cassius Clay, who still claims the world heavyweight title, will box either Jerry Quarry of Bellflower, Calif., or Argentina's Oscar Bonavena in Atlanta Oct. 26, a promoter said Friday.

The understanding here is that it most likely will be Quarry, ranked as the No. 1 contender by Ring Magazine and No. 3 by the World Boxing Association.

State Sen. Leroy Johnson made the announcement. Johnson is head of House of Sports, Inc., which plans to co-promote the fight with Sports Action, Inc. of New York. Sports Action Inc., ran the heavyweight elimination tournament after Clay was stripped of his title by the WBA for his failure to accept induction into military service.

Clay, who prefers the name of Muhammad Ali, now has a license to box in Atlanta. He boxed eight rounds against three opponents here Wednesday in his first public fighting appearance in more than three years. The show was co-promoted by House of Lords and Sports Action, Inc.

Auto Racing Needs Image

By DAVID B. LOCKTON
ONTARIO, Calif. (NEA) — It has been said that the sport of automobile racing has a persecution complex. And, if you look back, you can see the obvious symptoms.

As a sport — and as Big Business — racing long has felt it deserved the same recognition in newspaper that traditionally has been monopolized by football and baseball.

Unfortunately, its case has been somewhat fragile. While motor sport claims to be America's No. 2 boxoffice attraction (second to horse racing), it has not been able to capitalize on that ranking. Why?

Bluntly, it probably can be traced to its image. Or lack of it. Racing simply has demanded major league respect from media — and the general public — without acting the part.

For example, the sport has exhibited its big-name drivers on county fair tracks one day and, figuratively, at Indianapolis Motor Speedway the next. Its championships have been determined in settings that range from bush to big league.

Conversely, Willie Mays never was asked to hit home runs for the Giants in Candlestick Park one day and a back-alley sandlot the next.

Racing's stars long have deserved no less prominence than their counterparts in football, baseball or golf. They earn more money, are every bit as articulate and are athletes themselves in the real sense. But they have been trapped by a unique, and not always flattering, environment. This mixture of minor and major league status has clouded the entire sport, particularly in the minds of newsmen who don't have a full understanding of racing.

There is no confusion between big league and minor league baseball. The definitions are clear. So it's little wonder that auto racing, its image blurred by its own hand, has attracted the kind of coverage that is really less than it deserves but only what it really could command.

On the positive side, however, I think the real turning point for the sport has occurred. In the past decade auto racing has gone through a drastic remodeling. It was a period beset with growing pains.

The sport itself, which could be described as a many-splintered thing, is growing more adhesive.

Ontario Motor Speedway can provide a perfect illustration of the change that is taking place. Call it a sign that the sport truly is coming of age.

At any rate, as this $25.5 million track was being built — designed to feature all types of major racing events — skeptical observers were saying that OMS would not be able to come to agreements with the four sanctioning agencies.

And, I can confess, there were times when the task appeared impossible. But it happened. We have four major events planned on our annual calendar — one each with the U.S. Auto Club, National Hot Rod Association, NASCAR and the Sports Car Club of America.

Automobile racing has been called a confusing sport, bogged down by what appear at times to be arbitrary rule changes, internal strife and poor facilities that attracts only the hard-core fans.

See Tight Battle For Grid Honors

(Last of A Series)
By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Can Texas retain its national championship?

Will Ohio State recapture the crown it won in 1968 and surrendered to Texas late last season?

Can Southern California become the first team to make five consecutive trips to the Rose Bowl ... and perhaps pull down a No. 1 ranking along the way?

Is an unprecedented fourth straight Lambert Trophy, symbol of Eastern supremacy, in store for Penn State? How far can the Nittany Lions extend their 22-game winning streak and unbeaten string of 30 games?

The answers to those and other questions will be forthcoming starting next weekend when college football launches a new decade that promises to continue the offensive fireworks that came out of the 1960s.

Given a shot at No. 1 ranking are Texas, Ohio State, Southern Cal, Mississippi, Arkansas, Stanford, Notre Dame, Houston, Penn State, West Virginia, Kansas State, Missouri, Nebraska and Michigan.

Ohio State's Buckeyes were thundering along toward a second consecutive perfect season — and a Super Bowl bid, some wags said — when Michigan brashly upset them in the 1969 finale.

Woody Hayes is not one to let bygones be bygones and you can almost bet he'll have his Buckeyes invade Columbus, Ohio, on Nov. 21 for the rematch.

The veteran coach has superstars galore, starting with two All-Americans, cornerback Jack Tatum and middle guard Jim Stillwagon. Add on the likes of defensive end Mark Debeve, linebacker Doug Adams, safety Mike Sensibaugh, guard Brian Donovan, tight end Jan White, split end Bruce Jankowski, running backs John Brockington, Leo Hayden and Larry Zelina ... and quarterback Rex Kern, the magical ball-handler.

Texas leads Ohio State in returning lettermen, 34-31. And for those who contend that the Buckeyes play a patsy schedule, remember that the Longhorns play all their games within the friendly confines of the Lone Star State.

Coach Darrell Royal gets back two second-team All-Americans in fullback Steve Woster and defensive end Bill Atesis and third-team halfback Jim Bertelsen, along with tackle Bobby Wuensch (just as good as All-American) Bob McKay, Royal says, wide receiver Charles Speyer and linebackers Scott Henderson and Bill Zapalac.

Royal's imaginative wishbone-T offense should be off and running toward another showdown date with Arkansas, this time on Dec. 5, again pushed to the end of the regular season for national television purposes.

Arkansas will challenge Texas in the Southwest Conference with the superb passing combo of quarterback Bill Montgomery and split end Chuck Dieus and an outstanding runner in Bill Burnett.

In the Pacific-8, Southern Cal will be challenged by Stanford with UCLA, Oregon and California the dark-horses.

Coach John McKay at USC has a goodly supply of letterman back, including quarterback Jimmy Jones, tailback Clarence Davis, flanker Bobby Chandler, linebacker Greg Slough, defensive tackle Tody Smith and deep back Tyrone Hudson.

Jim Plunkett, a likely No. 1 pick in next winter's pro draft, leads Stanford's title challenge along with ace tight end Bob Moore.

Plunkett's possible top challenger for Heisman Trophy laurels, Mississippi's Archie Manning, is the pride of the Southeastern Conference and the main reason the Rebels are favored to outscrap Tennessee, Louisiana State, Florida, Alabama, Auburn and Georgia in a wild conference dogfight.

Florida, with John Reeves throwing to Carlos Alvarez and handing off to Tommy Durrance, should have one of the better attacks around.

In the Big Eight, Kansas State has a Heisman candidate in quarterback Lynn Dickey, who wears white shoes a la Joe Namath and sometimes throws like Namath, too.

Missouri has some great players such as tailback Joe Moore, split end Mel Gray and tackle Larron Jackson but must replace quarterback Terry McMillan. Nebraska has no less than two fine quarterbacks in Van Brownson and Jerry Tagge. Michigan once again is expected to be Ohio State's chief contender for Big Ten honors. The Wolverines would like to prove that 1969 was no fluke and the likes of running backs Billy Taylor and Glenn Doughty, tackle Dan Dierdorf, middle guard Henry Hill and linebacker Marty Huff may be able to do just that.

Houston has a split end in Elmo Wright who is on the verge of several national pass-catching records. But much will depend on how fast quarterback Gary Mullins recovers from an injury.

Notre Dame, back in the bowl picture, will have its usual fine team, with quarterback Joe Theismann, guard Larry Dierdorf, split end Tom Gatewood and defensive back Clarence Ellis leading the way.

Penn State suffered severe losses from the club that finished second to Texas a year ago and beat Missouri in the Orange Bowl. The Lions will be threatened in the East by West Virginia, a newcomer to Eastern College Athletic Conference ranks.

Chuck Tanner New Manager Of Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Chuck Tanner, manager of the Hawaii Islanders in the Pacific Coast League, was named manager Friday of the Chicago White Sox.

Tanner, 41, an eight-season minor league manager in the California Angels' system, was hired by Su Holcomb, new Sox general manager, to replace Don Guttridge.

Guttridge was dismissed Wednesday.

Tanner will take over as manager of the Sox at the conclusion of the Pacific Coast League's championship series, which started Friday in Spokane, Wash. He will join the Sox no later than Sept. 15.

Tanner was signed to a two-year contract.

DARLINGTON, S.C. — It hasn't changed at all. Every time you drive down Highway 151 from Charlotte, you expect something to be different. But it isn't. In all reality, I suppose at the end of the next 20 years everything will be just as it is today because this is Darlington, and it is Southern 500 time, and to change anything would be like eating pan-fried chicken on Monday instead of Sunday.

Oh, there's been fresh paint put on the famous Darlington Raceway grandstands, and the Winn Dixie market has added on, and the drive-in hamburger stand has changed hands again.

But the feeling that Labor Day is almost here, and with it the race and 75,000 fans coming to a town that normally has 6700 people, hasn't changed at all.

Darlington on Labor Day. The Southern 500. Granddaddy of all stock car races. All of the stories that one hears about Southern stock car racing are true when it comes to Southern 500 time.

Darlington Raceway is the oldest super-speedway in the country. This is where it all began. On Labor Day, 1950, seventy-five cars took the green flag from starter Alvin Hawkins and tradition began.

While the race is what makes Darlington famous, it's the race track infield that makes it infamous.

When the first Southern 500 was held, nobody had any idea how many people would show up. Darlington is out in the middle of nowhere. The only thing that the then 1 1/4-mile track shared with the world was cotton fields. Labor Day in the Pee Dee is hotter than a pot-bellied stove in the middle of winter. The promoters would make a mint or go top city.

The people came. And they came and they came. On Sunday before the race, cars were already lined up for miles in all directions. The only way to clear the highways was to open the infield gates and let the fans stay in the infield of the track. That decision started something that to this day one has to see to believe.

Come Monday morning, thousands of race fans were in the Darlington Raceway infield. Most had spent the night. It made 16th Street at the Indy 500 look like a Sunday school picnic. You name it and it happened in the Darlington infield.

The only problem was nobody had paid to get in. The plan was to open the gates in the morning and herd the people out and sell them a ticket.

Great, except that now there were thousands of fans on the road once again and thousands of fans in the infield who were supposed to get out. An irresistible force meeting an immovable object.

The infield fans stayed and the grandstand was overflowing. A 75-car field and 400 laps of racing. The Southern 500 was born.

Every year for the past two decades the infield gates to Darlington Raceway have been opened on Sunday afternoon. Nobody sleeps the night before the Southern 500 in the Darlington infield.

People who see one another only once a year renew friendships. Thousands of dollars are won and lost. It's music and mayhem.

Darlington Raceway is the only race track to have its own

St. Louis. It only gets used once a year.

The races at Darlington have been classics. Johnny Mantz won the first one in a 1950 Plymouth. Richard Petty, NASCAR's all-time winner, is favored by the Union 76 Racing Panel of Experts to win the 21st race. He drives a Plymouth too.

Darlington and the Southern 500 are meccas to the sport of stock car racing. This is it. The hallowed ground. Tradition. The place to come at least once in a lifetime. It hasn't changed at all.

Expos Top Cards 9-7 In 13 Innings

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gary Sutherland's sacrifice fly with the bases loaded and Reggie Cleveland's wild pitch produced two Montreal runs in the 13th inning and gave the Expos a 9-7 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Friday night.

The Expos took a 7-5 lead in the 10th on a pair of bases-loaded walks by Tom Hilgendorf, but the Cardinals tied it in the bottom of the inning on Jose Cardenal's two-run homer.

Capital Spending Estimates Revised Downward For '70

By LINDA RUBEY
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Pessimists got a little more fuel for their arguments that the economy is not yet ready to make a turnaround with the news this week that business was continuing to trim 1970 capital spending plans.

The new estimate for plant and equipment expenditures by business this year is $90.52 billion, the Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission said. This is up 6.6 per cent from last year, but below the 8 per cent originally forecast by the President's Council of Economic Advisers and below the 9.8 per cent suggested by the same survey last March.

Administration economists said they weren't overly concerned by the downward revision because it was consistent with the effort to achieve a moderate level of economic growth with less inflationary pressures.

One administration economist noted that a recent National Industrial Conference Board study showed manufacturers were increasing their appropriations for future outlays. He said the present slowdown in spending would be a positive factor in helping corporations to rebuild their cash liquidity positions which had been generating some concern recently.

Most economists felt the report was consistent with recent forecasts for a slow-moving recovery in the second half of 1970 with investment outlays rising by only about $1 billion a quarter.

Economists at a major New York City bank reiterated the belief that the economy is showing some firm signs of recovery and that it should be really growing again by next year.

"An increase in industrial production, a sharp pickup in new orders for durable goods, a significant slowdown in the rate of increase in consumer prices, a rise in the stock market—all these are indications that the tone and tempo of the U.S. economy have been changing in recent weeks, and for the better," economists at First National City Bank said.

They added that the first clear signs of response to the moderate fiscal and monetary expansion policies initiated last winter would continue to be more apparent in the financial markets than in the economy itself for some time to come.

The bank predicted that capital spending by industry would grow less rapidly than the rest of the economy, a fact substantiated by the Commerce Department and Security and Exchange Commission report. But increases in capital spending on housing and state and local government projects can be expected, it added.

Figures released by McGraw Hill showed that although total construction contracts for July, 1970 were below the total for July, 1969, housing construction made considerable gains over the past year.

Everyone concedes that the biggest force in moving the economy is consumer spending, which means a lot of economists have been looking that way recently waiting for the consumer to make his move. Most agree that no big boom in consumer spending is likely to develop, but other factors would seem to suggest that the consumer has enough cash to put him in a little more of a buying mood soon.

The big question in most economists' minds is when. The answer they admit, most probably will be found in another question: Will high prices continue to make the consumer leary of excessive purchasing and induce him to save rather than spend? Positive factors on the consumer spending scene are the $3.6 billion rise in July in personal income, the removal of the remaining 5 per cent surtax withholding charge, the increase in personal tax exemption, and a big retroactive pay boost for Federal employees. Altogether this adds $10 billion or more yearly to potential purchasing power.

Still, most economists are taking the view posited by General Electric's economists in its quarterly economic review: "We think that consumers will remain uncertain for the next six months. Confidence will not revive until prices gain slow and there are signs that the Vietnam war will definitely end."

In one of the most optimistic notes struck yet, Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans predicted interest rates would decline to 6 per cent in the near future.

The prime interest rates have been above 6 per cent since April 1969, and currently are running at 8 per cent. The prime rate is the amount banks charge their best customers.

Substantiating evidence for this optimism was also found in banking data presented this week. This data showed the Federal Reserve System had pressed its policy of monetary expansion during the last two weeks. The availability of funds in the economy grew at a much more rapid rate than has been characteristic recently, the data suggested.

If this flood of cash into the banks were to be continued over the next few months, it could be a major factor in reducing the prime lending rates of major banks from 8 per cent, observers said.

A separate study conducted by Argus Research Corp. arrived at the same conclusion. The study predicted a cut in the prime rate from 8 per cent to 7 1/2 per cent could be forthcoming this month.

Unexpected Gains Posted On Last Week's Market

By CAROLE MARTIN
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, showing some unexpected strength, registered a tidy advance for the past week as institutional traders apparently had second thoughts about waiting for better prices.

"Some of the institutional investors may have been caught a bit short by the rally," commented Robert Johnson of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis.

COTTAGE OPENS — Sandy and Jim Flynn have opened the Cottage, an ice cream shop at 619 N. Prairie, the site of the former Pine Cone Shop. The Flyns are holding a grand opening today. A "Space Walk" trampoline-type novelty will be set up at the shop. Helium balloons are on sale and ice cream cones are priced at five cents. The completely remodeled store will also have a beauty shop in the rear next week.

Some may have been sitting on more money than they wanted to keep but thought that better prices would prevail. Along came the rally Thursday, and as a result, they may have had second thoughts and decided not to sit on all of the cash but to commit some of it," he said.

Other brokers, who admittedly were taken by surprise when the market posted sizable gains Thursday, said they believed the advance—sustained by Friday's activity—signaled renewed confidence on the part of the investor that the economy was improving and that inflation was coming under control.

The Dow average of 30 industrial stocks managed a net gain of 5.34 points to close at 771.15, highest level since April 21.

Among other market indicators, The Associated Press 60-stock average was up 2.4 to 2254.0 for the week and the New York Stock Exchange's index of 1,200 common stocks was ahead .63 at 45.11.

Brokers cautioned, however, that concern about the possibility of an auto strike still lurked in the shadows of Wall Street and could influence the market's activity Tuesday, when trading resumes after the Labor Day respite.

For the week, 1,155 issues advanced and 465 stocks declined, compared with 1,444 gainers and 236 losers the previous week and 419 advances and 1,148 declines during the same week a year ago.

Sixty-five stocks touched new yearly highs, while 16 touched lows, compared with 77 new highs and 42 new lows the previous week.

Occidental Petroleum was the volume leader for the week, ahead 3 1/2 to 20% on 983,100 shares. Most of the stock's activity occurred Friday after it was announced that Occidental had settled the posted-price issue with Libyan Government and that production from its concession was restored.

Natomas gained 18 1/2 points to close at 58 1/2 on a volume of 912,300 shares for the week. Natomas announced Tuesday that its well of its Indonesian subsidiary brought in oil.

Third-most-active issue was Telex, up 2 to 14 on 718,200 shares.

The bond market rally lost momentum the past week, and prices in most sectors declined, the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers reported.

Government bond prices fluctuated within an unusually narrow band and closed Friday essentially unchanged.

Three-month Treasury bill rates rose by more than 10 basis points to a high of 6.40 per cent.

Price declines in the corporate bond market offset almost half of the previous week's gains.

Wheat Futures Gain Four Cents Per Bushel

By ED DE MOCH
AP Business Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures prices advanced nearly 4 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade the past week, but other grains were irregular.

Soybeans prices also closed out on an irregular tone, but soybean oil and iced broilers closed higher while soy meal was lower.

Trade was relatively active and mixed, although public participation appeared to slacken off toward the week's end.

When trade had ended on Friday for the week, wheat futures were 1 1/2 cents a bushel lower to 3 1/2 higher, September 1.63 1/2; corn was 1/4 to 2 cents lower, September 1.56 1/4; oats were 1/2 lower to 1/2 higher, September 76 1/4; and soybeans were 1/4 lower to 3/4 higher, September 2.77 1/2.

Soybean oil was 2 to 32 points higher, September 11.20; soybean meal was 55 to 125 points lower, September 80.75; and iced broilers were 8 to 40 points higher, September 24.50.

The extent of corn blight infestation and possible damage to this year's crop was still the prime topic of conversation on the exchange floor, but it appeared many long preferred to take profits during the week rather than risk any more inroads on advances they've held for several weeks.

Profit-taking was the main reason for selling, and any buying was generally linked to the weather and speculation as to how much more the blight had affected crops.

Next week, after the close of business on Friday, the government will issue its estimate of yields of various food and feed grains for this year.

The estimate of corn production, based on conditions of Aug. 1, was listed at about 4.7 billion bushels. Blight damage reportedly has been expanding, according to some trade sources, and this has been a strong factor.

tor in the advance of corn futures prices.

The trade estimates the government probably will trim its last production figure to around 4.3 billion bushels, but some bulls in the corn pit are talking about a 4 billion figure, while bears estimate there will be little change from the last 4.7 billion bushels figure.

Wheat prices advanced on strong buying linked to sharply improved exports, but the rise was greatest in nearby options, which set new highs for the season. Oats showed little change for the week.

When trade had ended on Friday for the week, wheat futures were 1 1/2 cents a bushel lower to 3 1/2 higher, September 1.63 1/2; corn was 1/4 to 2 cents lower, September 1.56 1/4; oats were 1/2 lower to 1/2 higher, September 76 1/4; and soybeans were 1/4 lower to 3/4 higher, September 2.77 1/2.

An All-Black School Wants to Stay That Way

WILSON POINT, La. (NEA)

School has opened in this part of the South with at least one ironic twist to the desegregation dilemma.

Far from the blacktop here in central Louisiana there is a small, nonconforming, eight-grade institution which has been segregated for four decades. Now both pupils and parents are nervously aware that their traditions are in jeopardy.

One student, 11-year-old Philip Coleman, says it for all: "Everybody here likes school the way it's always been. We don't wanna be bused someplace else. We don't want anything any different."

You may have already guessed that the ironic twist here is that Philip Coleman is Negro, not Caucasian. That his school is all black, not all white. And that the tradition of this boondock region is not rednecked bigotry—but pure and plain-ly soul.

Wilson Point is a mile or two of dirt road outside Ruby, La., which is outside Pineville, La., which is outside Alexandria. Never mind looking for it on a map. Locals say the best way to get here is as the crow flies—only not many crows bother flying this way.

The neighborhood is entirely black. A colony of private Negroes, whose history predates the recollections of the 35 resident families.

The settlement is not much. Mostly potholes and pine tree needles.

"About the only thing good we got, other than a church, is our school," admits community leader Rev. Arthur Coleman. "We're all very proud of it. It's got a good academic record. That's why we don't want it to change none now."

Unfortunately, the law may insist that the school change. Because it's a glowing example of everything desegregation is trying to cure.

For one thing, the Wilson Point school is, say the authorities, too small. There are only three rooms, one a combination kitchen-cafeteria. And there are only two teachers—one who handles the first through fourth grades; a second who takes care of five through eight. Moreover, the school is out-moded. History textbooks are old. Visual aids are scarce. And there is some foot-dragging in moving into the era of new math, new reading and new everything else.

Finally, obviously, Wilson Point is segregated.

Thus federal officials have said that "restructuring" is in order. The Wilson Point school may have to close. Explains school board member Charles Slay: "Washington has said it wants these kids to get an equal education with whites. Now, the school's not big enough to have whites bused in here. So what would happen is the black kids would have to be bused away. If that's what it comes down to, the Wilson Point school would die."

So there it is: The law. And here they are: The people of Wilson Point, easy and simple, poor but proud, worried that something that may be done "for" them will really be done "to" them.

They are miffed. "I tell you," says Wilson Point principal Pricilla Bush, "it'll be a bad day for these people if the school is closed. The school is the heart of the community. It's the meeting house, the cultural center—everything. Ladies borrow our lunch tables for socials, men borrow our books to write letters. And what's more the school has the only deep water well in the area. Honestly, I don't think this community would survive if their schoolhouse was taken from them."

Besides, says the principal (for 22 years), Wilson Point has nothing to be ashamed of academically. It may be small but it's very productive. Pricilla Bush says teaching is intense and individualized. As a result, during her tenure alone, 75 kids have graduated. Fifty of them completed high school, ten finished college.

But even beyond the statistics, and beyond the community needs, there is one more concern of local school ways.

MEETING HOUSE, cultural center—everything. To Wilson Point, the school is more than a school. It's the heart of the community.

That is the social concern. "To tell the truth, I don't like white folk. But we never had 'Well,' says one resident the idea of busin' my kids to much to do with them before. named Coleman (almost every- a school with whites in it. Now And I don't see no good reason body is named Coleman here), I don't have nothin' against for changin' that now."

Weeder's Guide

By EARL ARONSON

AP Newsfeatures

After blossom time, flowering shrubs should be given their annual pruning to keep them in shape and shapely and to encourage development of new wood. It also will encourage vigorous growth.

Azaleas should be pruned lightly, thinning dense surface growth and removing dead wood. Andromeda may be reduced in height by fairly heavy pruning. Rhododendron seldom needs pruning. If you do trim, cut only above the whorls of leaves.

Keep your beauty bush in bounds by reducing the number of old canes. Be careful in thinning lilac since blossoms appear on two and three-year old wood. Deutzia should be shaped but not pruned heavily.

Flowering almond's old wood should be pruned each year and flowering wood trimmed back after flowering. Long shoots of forsythia should be cut back and old wood thinned at ground level. Weigelia canes need thinning and flowering branches should be reduced to encourage strong wood for next year's bloom.

As far as evergreens are concerned, prune to remove winter-killed areas and to shape and promote thick growth. Pine, fir, and spruce develop compactness when half to three-fourths of new growth are removed. Hemlocks become bushier when tops are cut.

Removing top leaders of arbutus, yew, juniper and chamaecyparis that have grown too tall helps them develop better lower growth. Removing excess lateral branches opens evergreens to more light and air.

A good thing to remember is that when pruning shape the tree and shrubs to natural symmetry. Use sharp shears and don't tear the bark. "Clean cuts at a slant is a basic principle in correct pruning techniques," says our tree expert.

WATER TREES

Weakened trees need a generous supply of water in summer. Trees producing leaf and flower buds for next year need moisture. Watering near the trunk is not much help. The tree should be watered at the drip line or outer crown limit and beyond. That is where the feeder roots are and water is absorbed through these tiny roots.

If the soil is caked and dry, you can avoid water runoff by sprinkling the area lightly first. Moisture will soak in gradually. Trees respond well to pressurized injections of water and food into the soil through a large feeding needle. Such delivery of water and nutrients has the advantage of breaking up compacted soil and admitting air.

TEMPERATURE TELLS

Neighbor Col. Willis W. Lash, retired Army physician and author of a highly-regarded textbook on industrial medicine, has done some testing (he calls it "unscientific experimenting") regarding temperature regulation in the leaves of rhododendrons.

He reports: "Where the leaves were tightly closed—below zero, I picked off a few leaves and placed them in a warm room. In less than a minute they uncoiled and flattened out just as they appear in summer. Therefore it would seem the rapid change in the leaves is not caused by sap in the limbs or twigs to which they are attached." But he says this is merely a guess.

Paris Recognizes Danger of The Midi — Dowdiness

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
PARIS (NEA) — "In this age of protest, when youths all over the world seem to be against everything, it is a surprising fact that they are taking the unattractive, ungainly, uncomely, unalluring, unstylish, untempting, unseductive and unfeminine maxi horror lying down. This is really skirting the issue with a vengeance."

So spoke a Parisian, a man-about-town who ordinarily pays little attention to the vagaries of fashion but who suddenly has become aware of the controversial hemline.

What people are waking up to is the fact that the entire fashion picture has changed. Time was when Paris creators dictated, their wealthy, chiefly mature, clients accepted and the rest of the women copied them more or less successfully. But who was it who first took to the maxis like ducks to water? The young.

Today it is the more mature women who find themselves in an unprecedented quandary. Instinctively they realize that the midi and maxi are capable of adding ten years to their age if they do not match their hems to their silhouette.

Granted there are many sins committed with the brief skirt, but somehow while it could and often did look slightly ridiculous on some, it didn't look dowdy. And that is what the new lengths will do if everything is not "with it." The new fluid long look cannot be achieved just by letting down a hem or adding a band of fur. That is what is tantalizing about the whole thing.

The main culprits, Yves Saint Laurent and Pierre Cardin, the "two avant-garde Paris designers" who are cited at great length in EXPRESS, a political magazine which usually does not devote six pages to fashion, just shrug their shoulders and say: "It had to happen."

Why? How could they know? "It is just simply in the air," has been for almost two years now, "was their evasive reply."

Asked what his advice to women was to meet the drastic change in fall fashions, Yves said, "Let them buy a long skirt and a coat in wool jersey. Also a pair of slacks. This will carry them along and they will soon feel at ease in the outfit, dressed for the day." But he also pointed out that the long, lean look means that nobody can expect to look "with it" if she does not change her way of thinking, her approach to fashion, her attitude and gestures.

As for the answer to a problem which is in the minds of countless women today — what to do with an already existing wardrobe — Yves says: "I don't

Paris designers have decreed that we shall wear the longuette and tossed off the total change with, "It had to happen." Here's how three of the fashion greats treat the long look for fall and winter. From Saint Laurent (left) a mid-calf-length suit in brown suede with steel rivets at the hem, waist, collar and on the sleeves. Pierre Cardin's long evening dress (center) is in shiny black velvet and opens above the knees like a flower with petals hemmed in black ostrich feathers. ## Marine Defector Returning To U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — John M. Sweeney, 21, a Marine who said he defected to the Viet Cong after his company commander shot at him and left him for dead in the jungle, has returned to the United States at his parents' request and is undergoing military debriefing.

Sweeney, listed as a "returned prisoner of war," arrived Monday from Stockholm where he "requested assistance in voluntarily returning to military control," the Pentagon said.

Newsmen were denied access to Sweeney pending completion of the debriefing and examination at St. Albans Naval Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sweeney of West Babylon, N.Y., the youth's parents, travelled to Sweden know. Let them shorten their dresses to wear over pants or skirts as tunics. Change their accessories. Wear exactly matching lights. The present mode is, more than anything, a state of mind. A woman who gets herself into long skirts without changing her personality will never, but never, be fashionable."

According to this young revolutionary, there is no question as to whether the longer skirt is fashionable or not. All fashions are feminine—even slacks. Femininity resides in the woman herself, not in what she wears.

Courages, who sired the mini, is up to all sorts of tricks with the long look to make it look short, but he nevertheless has gone along with it.

"No use going against the tide," he says. But his women start off with a basic cat suit, a belt, top boots, a few pieces of jewelry. Over this goes a garment — dress, skirt or coat slit to the thigh or with flying panels. Pierre Cardin followed this line also.

There is a tendency today to say that Paris, as the fountainhead of fashion, is dead. Yet foreign buyers, stylists, manufacturers and fashion writers still come in hundreds twice a year to see what Paris has to offer.

A resident buyer for one of the leading American department stores said, "Let's face it. There are 'ideas' in America, in Spain, in Italy and in Great Britain. But people in the business come here because they need to know that these ideas are also 'in the air' in Paris, that they will be worn in Paris. Otherwise, the ideas just simply don't 'take.'" after the Marine held a news conference last week claiming he had defected. The couple was reported Monday to be occupying a hospital room adjacent to their son's.

A Marine Corps spokesman said no charges have been filed against the youth and none would be until "we have an extensive debriefing."

Last week, Sweeney, arriving in Stockholm after stops in Peking and Moscow on a North Vietnamese passport, said he had worked for the Viet Cong for 18 months.

He said "I was a member of the liberation forces" and said his defection followed the field incident in which his commander, whom he knew only as "skipper," shot at him and left him for dead.

Sweeney said two Viet Cong scouts found him after four days, took him to their camp and treated him for malaria. During the following months, he said he worked for a Viet Cong propaganda brigade and broadcast for Radio Hanoi.

The Marine Corps disputed Sweeney's claim. A spokesman said Sweeney was unable to keep up with his platoon, and was told by his platoon leader to rest by the side of a trail. He said Sweeney then disappeared and that searches failed to find him. He was listed as missing in action in February 1969 and later was reclassified as captured.

George Shultz Answers Challenge

By NEIL GILBRIDE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz, the quiet man of the Nixon administration, is emerging as one of its most powerful figures in his new job of managing the federal government's vast spending programs.

The 48-year-old Shultz, who switched from secretary of labor to director of the newly created Office of Management and Budget at President Nixon's request, described the formidable job simply as "a challenge."

"I'm an expert in taking pay cuts," Shultz grinned, and said fellow economists had kidded him about the wisdom of switching from the $80,000-a-year labor post to the $42,500 OMB post.

Despite the pay cut, knowledgeable Washington sources in and out of government describe Shultz's new post in such terms as "assistant president" and "general manager of the United States" and "the most important new government post to be created in years."

The task is no less than trying to manage the entire range of the federal government's spending programs adding up to some $200 billion a year.

Shultz, who left the relative quiet of academic life as dean of the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business for the maelstrom of national political life, is a polite and scholarly man with a quiet sense of humor he doesn't mind turning on himself.

Shultz's amiable demeanor hides a tough-minded firmness of purpose that can be surprising and disconcerting to those inclined to view him as a mild professor unversed in the rough-and-tumble of high political life.

"We're going to get some control over the cascading flow of federal expenditures," Shultz said firmly when sworn in by Nixon to the new job. "We're doing everything we can to see that each dollar expended is expended effectively."

It still is too early to say how Nixon's new effort to manage the budget in businesslike fashion will work under Shultz, but most of those who knew him believe Shultz can do it if anyone can. A major part of the job is resisting the blandishments of other federal officials demanding more money for their own pet programs.

Shultz's track record so far indicates he can resist such pressures.

As labor secretary in an unenviable period of the steepest inflation in 20 years, sharply rising unemployment and a declining economy, Shultz wasted no time in telling off either labor or business leaders he believed wrong.

He chided Chamber of Commerce officials at their own national conference for overemphasizing the threat of strikes to the nation. And he told construction union leaders bluntly they could wind up pricing themselves out of the market by demanding too high wage increases.

Yet he was given high marks by both business and labor leaders generally.

Shultz shows little ambition toward becoming the traditional power-broker in high places, softly discounting any suggestion that his new post amounts to being an economics "czar." Although obviously deeply involved in the prodigious job of managing federal expenditures and trying to take the teeth out of inflation, Shultz does not appear overawed by his own position or that of the President he works for.

Yet, after more than a year-and-a-half under the relentless pressure of the national spotlight, he still sometimes seems surprised at the tough pace.

"If you told me a year ago that I'd be working this hard, I'd have said you were crazy," he confided to an aide not long after taking the labor secretary's job—and now he's working even harder.

"They start meetings at 7:30 in the morning and meet all day," and informant said of Shultz's operations in the White House to get the new job underway.

But, as a husky 6-footer of considerable athletic ability who does not smoke and drinks sparingly, Shultz appears to have the stamina for the job.

A blocking back on Princeton's football team in 1939 and 1940, Shultz won his letter. His tennis game is aggressive and competent, and he shoots 80 on the golf course despite infrequent opportunities to break away from the government grind for recreation.

Shultz's high ranking in Nixon's esteem blossomed early while he was labor secretary, but there was nothing new in his rapid climb to prominence. In World War II, Shultz entered the Marine Corps as an enlisted man and emerged a major. After that he quietly, unspectacularly built a solid reputation as one of the nation's keenest experts on economics and labor affairs as professor, mediator, arbitrator and writer.

He and wife Helena, whom he met and married when she was a military nurse in World War II, have five children—10-year-old Alex; Barbara, 12; Margaret, 22, a teacher; Kathleen, 20, a University of Denver student, and 18-year-old Peter, who attends Palo Alto High School in California.

Shultz, despite his swift climb to the heights of power, is still basically what he was, an economist—if perhaps the nation's foremost. One of Shultz's most surprising friendships in Washington was with George Meany, the blunt and shrewd plumber from the Bronx who rose to head the 13.6-million-member AFL-CIO.

Despite frequent policy clashes between the labor federation and the Nixon administration whose election Meany had fought tooth and nail to defeat, the two men—Shultz and Meany—hit it off.

Meany appeared to appreciate Shultz's sincerity toward the problems of the nation's rank-and-file workers—even though they sometimes quarreled about such things as sharply rising plumbers' wages.

"There's nothing like a profit squeeze to put backbone into management," he once said of a tough set of labor negotiations in explaining that Nixon's policies were designed to slow business, take the heat out of the economy and pressure labor and business into more moderate wage and price hikes.

The remark infuriated Meany and other labor leaders, but the ill feeling over that incident didn't damage his over-all relationship with union leaders.

Nixon is staking a large part of his political fortunes on Shultz's ability to check inflation before the 1972 presidential election.

Besides acquitting himself well in advising Nixon on labor and economic affairs during his tenure as labor secretary, Shultz is also credited with rescuing Nixon's proposed revolutionary Family Assistance Plan, designed to wean welfare recipients to gainful employment through a sliding formula of federal payments that embrace the low-paid "working poor" in addition to unemployed welfare clients.

The big hangup was in devising the sliding scale formula that would encourage welfare recipients to train for jobs and go to work without penalizing them financially with wages lower than welfare payments.

"Shultz saved us time after time," said another high administration official of the conference that finally led Nixon to send the proposal to Congress where it is given some chance of passage.

Two accidents east of Jacksonville on U.S. 36-54 caused damage to three vehicles and minor injuries to some of the occupants of the autos.

One accident happened 1 1/4 miles east at 6 p.m. and involved a westbound auto driven by Phyllis K. Daniel, 25, of Indianapolis, and a second auto driven by Arnold Lewis, 70, of St. Joseph, Mo.

Mrs. Daniel told state police she was unfamiliar with the road and thought she was on a four-lane highway. Her auto sideswiped the Lewis auto which was eastbound.

A second accident at 6 p.m. happened 100 yards east of the Morgan-Sangamon county line and involved a pickup truck driven by Ernest C. Christensen, 16, of Chatham.

State police said the pickup truck was eastbound in a heavy rain, lost control and flipped several times and came to rest in a cornfield.

Christensen complained of minor injuries but did not require hospital treatment. The pickup had to be towed from the scene.

Mr. Ryan explained that after research into previous cases of a similar nature, it was his opinion that the evidence submitted would be insufficient to support the charge.

Ryan said Mr. Gabhart, operator of the Underground City Hall, was in his office Friday afternoon discussing the incident. Gabhart said he did not have any intention of offending either the flag or any person.

Gabhart was held overnight under $1,000 bond earlier in the week. He was charged with cutting an American flag for use in a record player as a speaker cloth.

Blight, Bugs, Weeds Provide Main Topics In Agronomy Report

URBANA — Southern corn leaf blight continues to dominate the farm scene this week. And Illinois farmers continue to seek answers to their many questions.

The University of Illinois Agronomy Day program, September 10, will offer farmers a chance to get some of the answers.

Agronomy Day at the U. of I. Agronomy South Farm, in Urbana, will feature a question and answer session on southern corn leaf blight. Extension specialists in plant pathology, agronomy, agricultural economics, agricultural engineering and animal and dairy science will field questions.

The first tour begins at 7 a.m. and new tours start every ten minutes thereafter until 1 p.m. Here's the September 3 report from U. of I. staff members:

Southern Illinois

Bob Webb, superintendent of Extension programs at the Dixon Springs Agricultural Center, says the amount of corn leaf blight damage in southern Illinois ranges widely. "Some fields show little or no damage, while others show almost complete loss as far as grain is concerned."

Webb says the most severe damage is generally restricted to late-planted corn in lowlands.

Many southern Illinois farmers are making silage from blight-damaged corn. But one tendency is to make it too early — especially from late corn. Webb says the leaves are dry and the plant looks mature but the stalks are still sappy and make wet, unpalatable silage.

Webb says other farmers are getting an early start on small grain seeding. He thinks small grains are a good bet for this fall. Adequate moisture is almost certain as we move into fall and with a little extra attention to seeding and fertilization, farmers can harvest a good crop of wheat next spring for livestock feed to supplement possibly reduced corn supplies.

Western Illinois

A whopping crowd of more than 1,400 attended the Kewanee Agronomy Field Day, Aug. 31, reports U. of I. area agronomist Carroll Chambliss. Interest ran high on southern corn leaf blight, and the twilight tours lasted until 9 p.m.

One seed producer told the group that seed will be available for 1971 planting, but not all of it will be resistant to the new race of southern corn leaf blight. He assured those attending that adequate supplies of resistant seed will be available in 1972.

Chambliss says there's still a wide range of concern over the blight problem among farmers he's talked with. Some are upset; others expect to harvest top yields of high-quality corn. Soybeans look good in western Illinois, and they are maturing fast.

Eastern Illinois

"Corn most severely damaged in our county is now showing the secondary ear rots," reports John Bickett, Vermilion county Extension adviser.

Bickett says he's had two reports of ears sprouting in the field. But in general, he says the recent warm, dry weather seems to be slowing the spread of blight development in Vermilion county.

"I don't know of any farmers harvesting corn for grain yet," Bickett says, "but a number of people are ready to begin making corn silage."

Bickett says soybeans in the county look excellent, but some fields are suffering some late-season weed problems.

Northern Illinois

"We're still fighting the battle of the blight," reports Derrell Mulvaney, U. of I. area agronomist at De Kalb. But it has been dry and warm the past week and Mulvaney feels that the spread of the blight has slowed somewhat.

Mulvaney has found some rot penetration on the ear tips. But so far, he's seen no penetration on other areas of corn ears. Mulvaney says he occasionally sees fields where most of the leaves have been killed—but this is usually in fields near maturity. The only silage making underway in northern Illinois is in fields that were intended for silage in the first place.

Northern Illinois soybeans still look good, Mulvaney says. But they could use some rain. Beans are filling, and in some northern areas, are very dry. Beans are standing well, Mulvaney adds. Earlier varieties will begin losing leaves in a week or two and lodging problems will diminish.

New seedlings could also use rain to get some growth before they move into the winter.

BRIMFUL and running over

By JIM BRIM

Do you have a field management record?

If you don't, take the time now to make a record of the way you handled each field. You need to know how much and when you applied fertilizer, the variety of seed used, the herbicide and insecticide used.

In the next few weeks you will have a chance to see how good your management was as you harvest your fields. If your records show exactly what you applied and when, you can analyze that information in relation to your yields and know some of the things you ought to do for 1971.

One of those things we are all sure of right now is that we should plant blight resistant corn. Southern corn leaf blight was first observed in the U.S.A. in 1923. It is a windborne fungus that can spread rapidly when conditions are right. Resistant hybrids have been developed. Resistance appears to be inherited through a set of genes and this may be transferred from one line of corn to another.

Now you should . . .

- ... Prepare for the harvest.
- ... Walk in the woods.
- ... Read Matthew 6:24-33.
- ... Cut weeds and corn in field corners at road intersections.
- ... Get the silo ready.
- ... Clean out those grain bins and fumigate.
- ... Watch the falling leaves.

Days are getting shorter, at both ends.

Check all lights on trucks and machinery. You are likely to be on the road in the dark more during the harvest season. The more readily visible you and your equipment are the safer you are.

The cheapest kind of experience is other people's experience.

Publicity Award Winners

George Trull, Morgan County Senior Extension Adviser, received a certificate of merit and a $25 cash prize for winning first place in the solo radio program in Illinois and his entry placed second in regional competition.

The award was made at the recent annual meeting of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents held in Corvallis, Oregon.

The contest is supported in Illinois by the Illinois Crop Improvement Association.

Farmers Union Warns Of Heavy Corn Sales

SPRINGFIELD—Raymond J. Watson, president of the Illinois Farmers Union, said recently that the national board of directors of the Farmers Union has asked the Commodity Credit Corp. to temporarily halt all sales of corn from its stocks.

Watson said, "In the national interest, CCC corn sales should be stopped and present stocks held in reserve until the blight damage can be accurately determined."

The Farmers Union statement said: "We are concerned that excessive disposal of corn at this time by the CCC may needlessly reduce prices to farmers, who will already be hurt by lower yields as a result of serious corn blight damage."

The FU board warned that a combination of forces appear to be setting the stage for lower feed grain prices to farmers, and higher meat prices to consumers.

"Sales by the CCC, such as last week's sale of some fifteen million bushels of corn from terminal warehouses, are clearly excessive for a single week," said Farmers Union. "The food industry is already using the information from the Department of Agriculture concerning the corn blight to launch a propaganda campaign to prepare consumers for unwarranted higher meat prices. The fact is that the total damage of the corn blight—as well as the relationship the reduced production will have to reserve stocks on hand—has not been fully assessed. A cautious policy by the CCC would be wise."

Outlook Meeting Here Wednesday

What's ahead for crop and livestock supplies and prices during the next 12 months? Morgan county farmers, grain and livestock dealers and agribusinessmen can get the latest information at the 1970 Fall Grain and Livestock Outlook meeting Wednesday evening, Sept. 9, at Blackhawk restaurant, Jacksonville. The dinner meeting will start at 7 p.m.

Extension adviser George Trull reports that Donald Doerr, University of Illinois farm management specialist, will be on hand to discuss current and expected grain and livestock supplies, anticipated domestic and foreign demands and projected price trends for 1971. Harry Kent, Inter-state Producers, will also be on the program, with information on the livestock outlook and feeder cattle situation.

"Good livestock and grain price forecasting requires good information. Farmers don't get grades for their livestock and grain price forecasts, but those who do the best forecasting earn the highest farm incomes," Trull said.

"The outlook meeting is being held to enable grain and livestock producers to have the latest information to help in making good decisions for the months ahead. All interested persons are invited."

Beef Cow-Calf Tour Sept. 12

A beef cow-calf tour, set for September 12 in Schuyler county, offers cattlemen a chance to visit a variety of operations and to discuss beef performance testing results.

The tour starts at 9:30 a.m.; stops during the day include the following farms:

9:30 a.m.—John Taylor farm, five miles south, ¼ mile east and ¼ mile south of Rushville. Take first blacktop road right south of Routes 24 and 67 intersection. Go four miles south to Taylor sign. Turn left on gravel road to first road south.

10:30 a.m.—R.G. Smith farm, southwest of Rushville off Route 24. Go to third side road to the right out of Rushville. Farmstead is first one beyond old brick school on the right.

11:30 a.m.—Lunch will be charcoal steaks at Scripps park. Reservations at County Extension office by Sept. 8.

1 p.m.—Charles Smith farm west of Rushville. Go north on Route 67 from the junction of Routes 24 and 67 to first road west. Follow road west through sharp turns to small church on left. Smith farm is ¼ mile beyond church.

2:15 p.m.—D. M. Tomlinson farm, 2½ miles north of Littleton and one mile west. Go north on Route 67 from Rushville to Littleton junction, and west to Littleton. Turn north at standard Station and 2½ miles to road east and one mile east.

3 p.m.—Ansel Hare's farm, south of Huntsville. Go west from Littleton on Route 101 to five miles west of Brooklyn. Turn south on blacktop to one mile south of Huntsville. Stop here for pasture tour. Hare farm is then ½ mile south to first road and ¼ mile east.

In addition to seeing cow herds, tour visitors will hear discussion of bull grading and evaluation, selection of replacement females, cow herd management, pasture management and evaluation of cow production.

A special feature of the tour will be cow judging with and without records, freeze branding and low-cost, low-labor cow wintering system.

All beef producers are invited to attend the tour. Details are available from the County Extension office.

THIS WEEK AT DIXON SPRINGS

Tour Franklin County Farms

Last Thursday, I joined a tour to five farms in Franklin County. The farm operators cooperate with the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Cooperative Extension Service by using experimental fertilizers produced by TVA and periodically open their farms for tours and demonstrations.

Operations Large-Diversified

I was impressed by the size of the farms and variety of enterprises on each of the farms visited. Farm sizes ranged from 700 to 800 acres with 500 to 600 acres of corn and beans grown on each.

In addition to large acreages of grain crops, each farmer also fed hogs or cattle or both, including cow and calf operations.

Liberal but wise use of fertilizer elements seemed to be a basic factor to profitable production on all the farms visited. And all farmers were young, or if not young, all had young ideas about trying new varieties or new practices and cultures. The farmers were not afraid to take some well-calculated risks and all were alert to the many choices in agriculture today.

I was impressed by the open and fine way in which the farm operators solicited and accepted constructive criticism and advice from others on the tour. It was an excellent learning experience.

Extension Adviser Dick Swope who arranged the tour did an excellent job of presenting information and in eliciting information from the cooperating farmers.

Herbicides and No-Till

On the tour, some of the most weed-free corn and soybeans were those no-till planted in rye or wheat winter cover crops, both ideal crops in which to no-till plant.

On one of the farms we saw what a good pasture fertility program and proper grazing management can do for keeping Ladino clover in the mixture with fescue grass. This pasture, eighteen years old, still had a high amount of Ladino clover. The farmer estimated that the rolling pasture land returned twice as much clear money from livestock gain as similar land in corn or beans.

Some Gloomy Spots

All of the corn was infected with leaf blight, some varieties worse than others. Yields will be down and the feeding value of damaged grain will be less than normal.

Recent hog prices are less favorable. Some of the hog feeders on the tour estimated that they expect to lose six dollars a hog, depending on when they bought the pigs for feeding.

But even with the soft spots in the markets and with the crop disease problems, the cooperating farmers on the tour maintained good humored optimism.

Good Combiner Can Earn $15 More Per Hour

Last fall soybean growers left 13 percent of their total crop on the ground . . . 145 million bushels according to the National Soybean Crop Improvement council. That's equal to $362 million left among the soybean straw!

Loss figures are the result of field studies made in several states. Bob Judd of the council estimates that farmers can earn $15 and more per hour by doing a more careful job of harvesting.

Surveys of top soybean farmers conducted for four years in a row by the council show that slower combine speed and beginning harvest when beans are at about 15 percent moisture are two of the best ways to reduce harvest losses.

Studies at Ohio State University, University of Illinois and Iowa State University also bear this out. "Thirteen to 15 percent moisture is best," say the engineers. "And when you slow ground speed down from five m.p.h. to 2.5 m.p.h., you cut total losses in half. Speeds greater than three m.p.h. cause the big increase in losses."

Illinois Farm OUTLOOK

BLIGHT MAY NOT CUT MEAT, MILK SUPPLIES

The southern corn leaf blight has continued its relentless invasion of the northern corn fields. This destructive invasion has spawned many rumors and questions about its effects on future food supplies and prices. We will list a few of the most common questions and our best answers.

Affect Our Food Supply?

Corn is the principal ingredient in the rations of hogs, beef cattle, dairy cattle, and poultry. Hence, a shortage of corn could cut the supply of pork, beef, milk, cheese, ice cream, eggs, chickens and turkeys.

Will Supplies Be Cut?

Probably not — at least not very much. The principal effect of the blight upon supplies of the animal products seems likely to be to restrict increases in production, rather than to cause major reductions in output. Farmers have been increasing the production of most of these products or were planning to do so. In fact, many farm leaders believed that farmers were increasing production too fast for their own good.

Example Of Excessive Production?

Farmers have flooded the market with broilers this year. For the first half of 1970 the production of poultry was 13 percent greater than one year before. Supplies for the last half of 1970 are expected to be 5 to 7 percent over year-ago levels. While consumers welcome cheap chicken, many producers are suffering losses. Even if the production of broilers is cut back slightly in 1971, supplies will be at near-record levels.

How About Beef?

Beef output was expected to increase moderately — 3 to 4 percent — in 1971. This increase may be cut off because farmers will sell their cattle at lighter weights. But this will cause no real hardship, since most of the loss will be fat, or tallow—which is removed at the retail store before the beef is sold or left on the plate at the dinner table.

Pork Chops, Ham, and Bacon?

Supplies of pork in prospect for the remainder of this year are 10 percent larger than those of last year. Furthermore, a USDA survey and report in June showed that farmers were planning to put 17 percent more hogs on the market during the first half of 1971 than in the same time of 1970. If farmers carry out those plans, consumers will have the biggest stacks of pork on their tables in 25 years, and many hog producers would probably suffer heavy losses. The blight may prevent over-expansion of hog production, but probably will not prevent some increase in pork supplies in 1971.

Milk, Cheese, and Ice Cream?

Farmers have been producing about 4 percent more milk than consumers have been willing to buy at going prices. The government has been buying the excess in order to support prices. Furthermore, the excess of production over sales to consumers was expected to increase during the next 12 months. The blight may cut milk production so as to reduce the amount of government purchases for price support, but probably won't reduce the supplies of milk, butter, cheese, and ice cream available to consumers.

Tours Of Sangamon Farms Arranged By Bureau Young People

Everybody — and especially urban young people — is invited to take one or more of the three Drive-It-Yourself Tours arranged by the Sangamon County Farm Bureau Young People's committee.

The tours will take in nearly every type of commercial agriculture and will be held next Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 12-13, from 1 p.m. until dark.

Members of the committee will be on hand at the three starting points to answer questions and to pass out booklets describing and mapping each route, along with a thumbnail sketch of each stop.

Route A, which includes the Auburn - Loami - Waverly territory, begins at the Marmont Machine Co. at the north edge of Auburn. There are seven stops:

Carl Renken, Auburn, 4 - H beef and hogs.
Herb Niemeyer, Auburn, automated feeding of beef.
Hall - Dale Dairy Farm, Auburn, modern dairy installation.
Emery Seiz, Waverly, large egg production facility.

John Beatty, Waverly, modern grain drying and storage.
Spaulding Orchard, Springfield, fruit production, handling and grading.
Tour B begins at the Bradfordton elevator west of Springfield and will visit six points:

C. A. Armstrong, Springfield, tree nursery, produce gardens.
Stone Seed Co., Springfield, hybrid seed corn production.
Ballard Farm, Pleasant Plains, beef.
John Irwin, Pleasant Plains, diversified farming, 4-H beef.
William Davis, New Berlin, grain drying.
Pleasure Acres, J. E. McGrath, recreation farm.
Tour C takes in the Williams-ville area and includes eight stops in northeastern Sangamon county. It begins at Jeffries Orchard, three miles north of Capital Airport.

"These tours are designed to give our urban friends a better understanding of today's agriculture," says Ed Mies of Loami, a member of the Young People's committee. "The more people who attend the better the understanding will be."

Forget Leaf Damage! Check Ears, Shanks

"As we watch the development of the southern corn leaf blight spread in Illinois, we feel it's now time to forget about leaf damage and to pay attention to ears and shanks."

That's the most recent advice to farmers from University of Illinois Extension plant pathologist Malcolm Shurtleff.

Shurtleff suggests checking fields two or three times each week. And he advises noting differences between hybrids when checking fields.

He points out that shank and ear rots are developing rapidly in many fields. And the rots may be present in fields where little leaf damage is noticeable. "Farmers can best gauge their own harvesting schedule by keeping a close watch on rot development in their own fields," Shurtleff says.

He outlines these types of ear rots likely present in most Illinois cornfields:

- Tip rot. Tip rot often follows injury to the ear tip such as the injury caused by insects.
- Husks are often discolored — tan, gray or brown — and if you peel back the husks, you'll find a gray or black rotted area at the tip of the ear. As the rot develops, it spreads down the ear toward the shank.
- Trichoderma rot. Trichoderma rot first appears as a white mold, but later turns a dark blue-green. The mold develops on the crown of the kernel and between kernels.
- Also look for spouting kernels on the ear. If you find sprouts, you'll probably also find Trichoderma mold.
- Helminthosporium rot. This rot first develops in the outer layers of the husks and then works into the ear. If you peel back the husks and examine the ear, you'll find a round to oval mold spot about two inches in diameter. The molds may be white to gray or black. Shurtleff says shank rot is also common in Illinois corn fields—in fields that look frost-damaged and ready to harvest and in fields that are green and look normal.

Shank rot causes ears that should be upright to hang down. If you check the shanks, you'll find them nearly rotted through. Rain and wind during the next 10 to 20 days — or delayed harvest — could cause serious ear drop as a result of shank rot, Shurtleff says.

Members may secure tickets from Farm Bureau directors, County Companies' agents, FS salesmen and the Farm Bureau office.

"There will be only 600 tickets sold," says Tom Doubet, Farm Bureau executive secretary. "So hurry and get your ticket, meet your friends, eat some good barbecued pork chops and hear a good speaker."

Questions, Answers On Corn Leaf Blight

Editors' Note: This is the fourth in a series of information releases on corn leaf blight. The information is being prepared by College of Agriculture staff members. Additional releases will be prepared as soon as information is available.

Q: Should I harvest my own seed from fields that have no leaf blight?

A: This is one of the last alternatives you should consider in Illinois. Give it low priority. You could expect a 20 to 25 percent drop in yield because it has been open pollinated. Unless you can get your field corn graded, you can expect problems in planting the seed.

Q: What should I do now about seed for next year?

A: Look over the varieties in your area and record the ones that have low infection of leaf blight. Check on the yield of these varieties. Rely on seed corn producers for advice and counsel. These people have done a tremendous job through the years and can be expected to advise you and offer you the best seed available.

Q: What about 1972?

A: There should be an adequate supply of varieties in Illinois that have good tolerance to leaf blight.

Q: Will seed for planting cost more in 1972?

A: It probably will, because much of the resistant seed will be produced by hand detasseling. That method costs more than using male sterility.

Q: Is the supply of seed corn for 1972 planting extremely limited?

A: No, it is not. There will be a considerable amount of hand-pollinated seed available in Illinois that carries resistance to Southern corn leaf blight. In addition many of our present varieties have performed well even in areas where leaf blight incidence has been high.

Q: Should I plan to switch to a crop other than corn because of the possible seed shortage?

A: It would be best not to make that decision until Illinois corn is harvested and a more realistic picture is formed of the damage from leaf blight.

The 101st Regiment Reunion

It was on Wednesday of last week that all of Morgan county bustled to help the veterans of the 101st Illinois Volunteer Infantry regiment celebrate their first reunion.

It took place Sept. 2, 1870, in the recently vacated "Court-house Yard" which was gradually acquiring the new name of "Central Park." The orator of the day was Major General John A. Logan of Jackson county, national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic and Republican candidate for reelection as Congressman-at-large.

At least 3,000 persons heard him "make a brilliant address of the heroism and continued zeal of the Union soldier, but yet some of his auditors were disappointed, as he spoke only thirty minutes, which many felt far too short considering the importance of the occasion."

Speech Too Short?
Yes, that was truly short — such famed orators as Yates and Oglesby didn't really get warmed up in less than two hours, although they had to take a little snort now and then to take the phlegm out of their throat.

The 101st Illinois regiment was truly Morgan county's own. It was formed in August, 1862, in the most hectic wave of patriotism ever known, and before the month was over the county had put more than 1,100 men in blue uniforms. A little more than 900 of them made up the 101st regiment; the other three companies were forced to join other regiments raised in adjoining counties as the 101st began training at Camp Duncan, the present fairgrounds.

This massive turnout of volunteers seems unbelievable today, but it happened just the same. How many do you guess Morgan county could raise today — in less than three weeks?

The citizens of Jacksonville took the lead in arrangements for the reunion, but were joined full-heartedly by men and women from every precinct in the county. The first citizens' meeting was at the courthouse Aug. 9. Capt. George W. Fanning of the Murrayville company was called to the chair and H. O. Cassell, a young Jacksonville attorney, was named secretary.

Ten days later the organization was perfected, with large delegations of citizens from each of the four Jacksonville wards, plus at least ten men and women from each precinct, from Waverly to Meredosia, from Lynnville to Prentice, and everything in between.

A Fine Day
The morning of Sept. 2 started out with some very black clouds, but after a shower the sun came out to make a wonderful day, fresh and cool. Roads were jammed with vehicles in all directions out of the city and by 10 a.m. the town was packed. Many of the streets and business houses were decorated for the occasion. A massive dinner "prepared by hundreds of fair hands, aided by many men," was served on long tables in the park, with the tables bedecked by bouquets of flowers.

Before the dinner the two town bands alternated to keep the park filled with music and the newly organized Jacksonville Zouave company gave its first parade in their fancy uniforms.

When the bugle sounded mess call the veterans took command of the tables.

Never derelict in battle, they proved themselves no shirks on this occasion. In a short time the handsomely arranged tables were but wrecks of their former selves.

Mayor William Branson was the presiding officer. State's Attorney William O. Brown welcomed the veterans and the response was made by H. O. Cassell who read letters from Col. J. B. LeSage of Meredosia, who rose to command of the regiment, and from the ever popular Gen. Joe Hooker, who personally had commended the 101st regiment after the capture of Lookout Mountain, Tenn.

Both expressed disappointment over inability to attend the reunion and Col. LeSage never missed subsequent reunions which were held every four or five years.

The history of the regiment was read by Robert C. Bruce, who had been a grocer on the south side of the square in partnership with Capt. Henry C. Coffman. Bruce recounted the experiences and exploits of the regiment, from Jacksonville to Cairo, to Lookout Mountain, to Holly Springs, Miss., to Stone Mountain, Atlanta, Savannah, up the Carolinas to Charleston and Richmond, victory, discharge and home.

A Good Outfit
Yep, the outfit didn't have to apologize to anybody.

A permanent reunion committee was named, with Capt. Fanning elected president; Capt. Philip Lee, a Jacksonville wagonmaker who sang at about half the funerals in the county for the next forty years was chosen vice president; H. O. Cassell, adjutant, and Robert Bruce, treasurer. Fanning and Cassell kept their offices all the rest of their lives.

About 250 of the original men gathered in front of the speaker's platform, but there were at least that many other veterans on hand, and "private citizens jammed the park to hear General Logan."

His "bob-tailed" address was well received, though most people commented that it was altogether too short and one old boy from Sulphur Springs declared: "It was might nigh no speech at all."

But the boys greeted old acquaintances and "remember back when" and the day was soon over and it had been a very pleasant day.

In winding up his account of the reunion Reporter J. G. Shaw commented:

We trust and believe that the day was one of great enjoyment to the reunited veterans of the 101st. Certain it is that the people of Jacksonville would feel a deep regret should they know that they had left anything undone which might have added to the pleasure of the occasion.

Everybody seemed most pleased with the first reunion of Morgan County's Own.

DRAFTING
ON THE 15TH
THIS RECRUITING "DODGER" circulated in August, 1862, helped bring more than 1,100 Morgan county men into the Union forces. Since the United States of America had never had a draft the people considered it downright cowardly, unthinkable to a real man. But early in 1865 the draft was instituted and the drafts staged at the northeast corner of the square brought many people to town, from all 10 counties of the 10th Congressional district.

This illustration is the poster reduced about 80% in size. Henry C. Coffman and John M. Snyder — Coffman sold groceries and dry goods on the south side of the square and Snyder was in the wholesale and retail meats and provisions business on East State street — proved to be extra-good recruiters and with the help of Jesse T. Newman, who bought more hogs than anybody else in the county, they raised three companies. Newman and Coffman were elected captains and Snyder was named quartermaster of the 101st regiment.

"Bein'," said the priest, "the answer for purgatory." "Put her down," said the curate, "put her down to the fut of the class." "Lave her alone," said the priest; "for any thin' you or I know to the contrary, she may be parifly right."

To the Illinois woman who's "from Missouri" when it comes to dishwashers.

We'll show you! You've had a yearning for a better way to spend your time than doing dishes.

But you're too practical to be sold on a dishwasher until you've seen for yourself.

Until you've seen that a dishwasher really does get dishes cleaner than you could by hand. That it really sanitizes. Really does pots and pans. Really saves all those hours of drudgery. And really doesn't cost that much to own and operate.

O.K. Our Home Economists were skeptical, too. They had to be shown that a dishwasher lives up to its promises. Now they'll be happy to show you.

Here's your invitation to a Dishwasher Demonstration Party in your neighborhood.

Positively no obligation. We don't sell dishwashers—we just believe in them. Fill out your R.S.V.P. below and mail it now. We'll let you know when our Dishwasher Party is taking place in your neighborhood.

If your husband is one of those practical types too, bring him along.

IT'S OUR BUSINESS TO SERVE YOU BETTER

'Bill' Tannahill Dies In Car-Truck Crash

A 29-year-old Murrayville man, William Earl "Bill" Tannahill, was killed instantly at 6:05 p.m. Friday in a grinding head-on collision with a tractor-trailer truck.

The accident happened about five miles south of Jacksonville on U.S. 67 at the Lynnville turn-off road.

Tannahill served as night pressroom foreman at the Journal Courier Co. and was en route to work from Murrayville at the time of the accident.

Funeral services for Mr. Tannahill have been scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at the Williamson Funeral Home in Jacksonville with burial in Murrayville cemetery. The family will meet friends from 7 to 9 p.m. today at the funeral home.

William E. Tannahill was born July 31, 1941, a son of Leslie and Genevieve Snow Tannahill. He married the former Sharon Wagstaff Aug. 17, 1963.

Survivors include his wife; two children, Linda Sue and Richard Allen; a brother, John of Texas; and seven sisters, Mary Hetzel, Imogene Suddeth and Patricia Collins of Springfield, Lola Reed of Franklin, Lillie Gillis of Waverly, Juanita Hipkins and Audrey Thixton of Jacksonville.

He was a 1959 graduate of Franklin high school and served with the U.S. Army. He was a member of the Murrayville Volunteer Fire Department.

Four Others Injured — State Police said the accident happened at 6:05 p.m. Friday when a southbound tractor-trailer unit driven by Ernest S. England, 41, of Belleville skidded out of control on the rain-slick highway and sideswiped an auto driven by Billie D. Rendleman, 39, of White Hall, knocking it off the roadway, then jackknifed and crashed head-on into the Tannahill auto.

The tractor-trailer unit came to rest across the pavement and blocked traffic for more than two hours. The Tannahill auto was knocked off the pavement and members of the Morgan County Rescue Squad worked about 30 minutes to remove Tannahill's body from the demolished auto.

The truck driver, Ernest England, was taken to Passavant hospital by Lowe ambulance for treatment of multiple cuts and bruises and admitted as a patient overnight. He was reported in good condition.

Rendleman and two daughters, Charlotte, 13, and Linda, 10, suffered abrasions but did not require immediate hospital treatment. Mrs. Juanita M. Rendleman, 39, also a passenger in the auto, escaped without injury.

Wreckers from Allied Motors cleared the wreckage of the tractor-trailer unit and the two autos. Jacksonville firemen were called to wash the pavement after a large volume of diesel fuel spilled onto the highway from the ruptured tank on the truck.

Traffic on U.S. 67 was detoured for several hours through Woodson while workmen removed the debris and vehicles from the scene.

One Witness — Investigating authorities said a witness to the incident, James Hall, 29, of White Hall, was ahead of the truck and signaled for a turn onto the Lynnville road from the highway. Hall told investigating authorities that he had been followed by the truck for some distance and that he planned to turn off onto the side road to allow the truck to pass. England later told investigators that he was unable to get the truck stopped on the wet pavement.

Coroner John B. Martin said an inquest would be held into the death of Mr. Tannahill at a later date.

Jersey City Council Okays Levy Ordinance

the ditch but maintain it for the next two years. It was the opinion of the Council that it is not the responsibility of the city to maintain private property. Street superintendent Don Parish stated he did not think opening up the ditch would solve the problem. He said that the problem exists to the east of Cross also. Chief of Police H. H. Blackorby, who resides on Cross avenue, agreed with Parish. He stated that when it rains, the water is ankle deep in his back yard. The matter was tabled for further study of the easement permit or determine if legal action will be taken.

Proposes Building — Mayor James Dolan has proposed that the City Council consider construction of a building for the Street Department on the property now owned by the city on Fairgrounds avenue. He said he thought the street department building on Pearl and Lafayette should be moved and that he had contacted the American Legion to see if an additional 200 feet could be obtained from them.

Commissioner Finis Schultz questioned whether or not the property owners in Northmoor Addition would object to construction of such a building, and City Attorney Phil Moore asked the Mayor if he knew whether the property was zoned for such use. No action was taken at the meeting this week, but the Mayor requested that the Council consider the proposal.

Mayor Dolan also reported that a representative of the Jersey County Historical Society had requested permission to store the papers and other items presently stored in the basement of the public library in the new city hall. The library plans to use this space and the historical items will have to be removed. The space needed is 10 by 10 square feet. The Council approved a motion to allow the property to be stored at the city building for 90 days and instructed the city attorney to draw up an agreement stating the city will not be responsible for the items.

COMFORTS OF HOME — A small trailer is home for Bill Kuss, a scout for the National Coachmen club. Kuss and his wife have been traveling and scouting campsites for club members for more than a year. Kuss is a retired banker from Franklinville, N.Y.

Camping Enthusiasts Lead A Nomad's Life

By REG ANKROM

For Bill and Maude Kuss, camping is more than a weekend pastime. It has become their sole purpose in life.

Both are participants in the National Coachmen Caravan Rally being held over the Labor Day weekend at Big Indian campgrounds near Litchfield.

The rally, which has attracted more than 450 campers from 17 states, is sponsored by the Jacksonville Coachmen Cavalier's club.

"When we retired from banking in Franklinville, New York, we wanted to travel. We took camping on as an avocation," said Kuss, a scout for the National Coachmen club.

For more than a year he and his wife have called a small trailer, fitted with kitchen facilities and a dining room that converts into sleeping quarters, home. As scouts for the Coachmen, they are kept constantly on the move planning routes and stops for trailer caravans.

Kuss claims that it wasn't a restless spirit that provoked him and his wife to travel.

"We could have gone someplace, maybe settled near one of the children's homes, and stagnated after retirement. But it was more of a desire to see the many wonders of this country."

"We had no hankering to go abroad with so many things we want to see here," Kuss explained.

Home life, Kuss said, is as routinely easy as life in a small apartment. And, because they are travelers doesn't mean they live from one restaurant to another.

They may find shopping bargains in one town where they can restock their staples. "We eat just like anybody else. We like fried chicken and steaks. Our table will seat eight and folds into the wall at night. We have all the facilities for a self-contained unit." He pointed out a gas-powered refrigerator, stove, cabinets, lavatory with bath and closet space.

The Kusses' home address is a post office box number in Franklinville. Mail follows them across the country.

"We get mail regularly through general delivery," Kuss said. "Since we travel by credit card, we have to keep up with it to keep our credit good."

"We try to leave our next address with the post office for forwarding the mail, try to anticipate where we'll be next so the local post office will have it."

Other emergencies are prepared for also, the retired banker said.

"We have arrangements made with our hometown undertaker and have cemetery lots for the unexpected. We will be shipped home and they know what to do."

"Almost every fall we get to my son's in Bethesda, Md., and get an annual medical and dental checkup."

Wherever Kuss stops, he said he generally finds a familiar neighborhood. In Jacksonville at the national rally, Kuss estimated that he knew about 75 per cent of the campers, having met them on other expeditions.

"They are just as helpful as anybody who'd live next door," Kuss reported. "We pulled in late last night and three people did our setting up. They hooked up our water and electricity and drain. We didn't have to do a thing."

"After traveling a while, you think nothing of coming into a strange place. Campers are a breed that make friends easily. There is always a common interest."

Traveling in a caravan has its advantages as well, Kuss explained.

"With a group of units going to the same place, there is security in a caravan and always somebody you can lean on if a problem arises."

"Not many people, though, move around like we do. The vast majority use their campers for vacations or weekend outings," Kuss said. "But we think we're like anybody else who likes to sightsee. The only difference is we can go and take our home along with us."

A plat for the South View Terrace subdivision, drawn up by George and Martha Hoffmeister, was presented. Mayor Dolan said that the city water department contends the water easements are inadequate and the Council objected to an entrance into the subdivision from Route 109 to Valley Drive. Commissioner Paul Long pointed out that the original plat did not include the entrance.

1970 Breath Of Life Campaign Launched

More than 70 coin collectors for the 1970 Breath of Life campaign are being placed in stores, restaurants, banks, and other business establishments this week, it was announced by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gillmore, campaign chairmen of the Gateway chapter of the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation.

The collectors will be a reminder to citizens of the community to contribute to the broadened program of the Foundation and the 110 Cystic Fibrosis Centers associated with the Foundation throughout the country.

Respiratory diseases such as chronic bronchitis, asthma with lung damage, childhood emphysema and bronchiectasis have symptoms closely resembling those of the inherited disease of cystic fibrosis, in which the lungs fill with thick mucus and endanger breathing.

The fight against cystic fibrosis, for which the Foundation has been seeking a control since 1955, already has produced therapeutic aids that have lengthened the useful, productive lives of patients.

These same procedures are beneficial to other children with lung diseases that are not inherited. In addition, the basic research program supported by the Foundation is making progress toward finding a control for cystic fibrosis.

There are tens of thousands of cystic fibrosis victims in the country, most of them undiagnosed, while five million children under 15 have other lung-damaging diseases.

"Coins put into the collection board not only advance the work of the Centers and help support the basic research program," said Mr. Gillmore, "they also help chapters provide valuable services to child patients and their parents. Your nearest center is the Gateway chapter at 7730 Carondelet, Clayton, Missouri."
